Jane Austen’s Popular and Critical Reputation

Plan of the Series .......................................................... xxxi
Preface .............................................................................. xxiii
Acknowledgments ............................................................. xxv
Permissions ....................................................................... xxvi

Works by Jane Austen ......................................................... 3
Chronology ......................................................................... 5

1. Jane Austen’s Slow Rise in Popularity .................................. 9

Facsimile: Jane Austen’s note on profits from her novels
Sidebar: Copies Sold and Profits

Remembered in Reviews ........................................................... 10

“Faithful Likenesses”—The Retrospective Review, 1823
“Not Merely a Scotch Miss Austin”—Blackwood’s Edinburgh Magazine, June 1824
“Too Natural”—Edinburgh Review, July 1830
Sidebar: “There Was Genius”—Sir James Mackintosh

After the Richard Bentley Edition .............................................. 15

“In a Way to Dwindle from Malnutrition”—R. W. Chapman
Memoir of Miss Austen—Henry Austen
Sidebar: Richard Bentley and the Standard Novels Series
Sidebar: “The Novelist of Home”—Richard Bentley
Sidebar: “The Queen of Novelists”—Harriet Martineau
Sidebar: “The MostFaultless of Female Novelists”—Sara Coleridge
“A Tardy Justice”—The National Standard of Literature, Science, Music, Theatricals, and the Fine Arts, 16 August 1833
Sidebar: “An Excellent Portrait Painter”—William Charles Macready
Sidebar: “As Miss Austen Says”—Charles Darwin
Sidebar: “The Highest Reputation”—Edward Bulwer-Lytton

Jane Austen—Allan Cunningham, Biographical and Critical History of the British Literature of the Last Fifty Years
Sidebar: “Sound Principles”—Samuel L. Knapp, Female Biography
Sidebar: “All-Perfect Austin”—Lord Viscount Morpeth
Sidebar: “Frittered away in Over-Little Things”—John Henry Newman
Sidebar: “Explains and Fills Out Too Much”—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

Austen and Shakespeare .......................................................... 33

Sidebar: “Wonderful Creature!”—Macaulay

“A Prose Shakespeare”—George H. Lewes, Fraser’s Magazine, December 1847

Sidebar: “Why Do You Like Miss Austen So Very Much?”—Charlotte Brontë

Sidebar: “A Complete and Most Sensible Lady”—Charlotte Brontë

Sidebar: “Persuasion’ Absolutely Haunted Me”—Mary Russell Mitford

“The Most Dangerous of Models”—Lewes, The Leader, 22 November 1851

“A Thorough Artist”—New Monthly Magazine, May 1852

Sidebar: “Models of Perfection”—Thomas Budd Shaw

“Excellence at Once Womanly and Literary”—Lewes, Westminster Review, July 1852

Sidebar: “With Fielding and Thackeray”—John Foster Kirk

“The Most Dangerous of Models”—Lewes, The Leader, 22 November 1851

“Petty Interests”—Westminster Review, October 1853

The Novels of Jane Austen—Lewes, Blackwood’s Edinburgh Magazine, July 1859

An Enduring Reputation .......................................................... 62

“Among the Most Perfect and Charming Fictions in the Language”—David Masson, British Novelists and Their Styles

“Truthful Individuality”—William Frederick Pollock, Fraser’s Magazine, January 1860

Sidebar: “She Never Goes Out of the Parlour”—Edward Fitzgerald

Sidebar: “Pinched and Narrow”—Ralph Waldo Emerson

Miss Austen’s Six Novels—Julia Kavanagh, English Women of Letters

Sidebar: Visiting Louisa Musgrove’s Fall—Pollock and Alfred Tennyson

Sidebar: “The Honour of the First Place”—Eneas Sweetland Dallas

Miss Austen—The Englishwoman’s Domestic Magazine, July–August 1866

Sidebar: “The Smallness of Life to Perfection”—Alfred Tennyson

---

2. Answering the Demand for a Growing Interest in Jane Austen .......................................................... 95

James Edward Austen-Leigh’s A Memoir of Jane Austen .......................................................... 95

Sidebar: James Edward Austen-Leigh

“A Memoir of His Aunt”—Mary Augusta Austen-Leigh

“The Youngest of the Mourners”—J. E. Austen-Leigh

Sidebar: “The Right Definition of ‘Genius’”—Mary Augusta Austen-Leigh

Responses to the First Edition of the Memoir .......................................................... 98

“All in His Power”—Richard Holt Hutton, The Spectator, December 1869

Sidebar: “Crisp, Rich English”—T. E. Kebbel

“Worthy of a Memoir”—Goldwin Smith, The Nation, 24 February 1870
“The Authoress Still Lives”—Saint Paul’s, March 1870
A “Fine Vein of Feminine Cynicism”—Margaret Oliphant, Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine, March 1870
“Apart on Her Rocky Tower”—Richard Simpson, The North British Review, April 1870
Sidebar: An “Affected, Husband-Hunting Butterfly”?—Mary Russell Mitford and James Edward Austen-Leigh
Sidebar: “Slow but Certain Growth”—Samuel Stillman Conant

The Enlarged Second Edition of the Memoir

“The Unfinished Works”—Mary Augusta Austen-Leigh
“Half a Century Deep in Oblivion”—J. E. Austen-Leigh
“Her Words Seem to Ring in Our Ears”—Anna Thackeray, The Cornhill Magazine, August 1871
“The Scene Was to Be Laid at Sanditon”—The Month, September–October 1871

In the Wake of the Memoir

“The Quiet and Placid Clergyman’s Daughter”—Henry Austin Dobson, The Civil Service Handbook of English Literature
“At Peace with Her Most Comfortable World”—Leslie Stephen, The Cornhill Magazine, March 1876
“Clear Pictures of Life”—Henry Morley, The Nineteenth Century, August 1877

Jane Austen and Her Works

A “Brilliant, Rather Hard Girl”—Sarah Tytler, Jane Austen and Her Works
Sidebar: “Miss Tytler's Life of Jane Austen”—Edward, Lord Brabourne
“Skilful Abridgments”—The Literary World, 29 October 1880

The Last Bentley Edition

“Had Miss Austen Felt More Deeply . . .”—The Temple Bar, March 1882
Is It Just?—Fanny-Caroline Lefroy, The Temple Bar, February 1883
“Scientific Criticism of the Delightful Jane”

Jane Austen's Novels—George Pellew

Jane Austen’s Letters

Style and Miss Austen—Mary Augusta Ward, MacMillan’s Magazine, December 1884
Sidebar: “Left Nothing But Chaff”—Mary Augusta Austen-Leigh

The Late 1880s

Sidebar: “Admiration, Even to Fanaticism”—Leslie Stephen
Comparing Small Things with Great—Coventry Patmore, The St. James's Gazette, 22 January 1886
Sidebar: A Celebrity of the Century—Thomas Hall Caine
Sidebar: Emma in a McGuffey Reader—William Holmes McGuffey
Sidebar: “No One Ever Cares Moderately for Jane Austen’s Works”—Mrs. Charles (Sarah Fanny) Malden

Jane Austen—Mrs. Henry (Millicent Garrett) Fawcett, Some Eminent Women of Our Times
“Miss Austen’s Keen and Friendly Eye”—Agnes Repplier
In the “Great Writers” Series .................................................. 192

The Charm of Miss Austen—Richard Holt Hutton, The Spectator, 22 March 1890

The Early 1890s ................................................................. 204

“Character of Jane Austen Shown in Her Writings”—Oscar Fay Adams, The Story of Jane Austen’s Life

“The Divine Jane”—William Dean Howells, Criticism and Fiction

Sidebar: “Gentle, Feminine, Merciless Laughter”—Agnes Repplier

Sidebar: “Utterly Out of Harmony”—Repplier

“One of the Miracles of Literature”—Repplier, Essays in Miniature

“The Most Charming and Incomparable of Old Maids”—Repplier, Essays in Miniature

The Classic Novelist—Alice Meynell, Pall Mall Gazette, 16 February 1894

“Pride and Prejudice Unhesitatingly”—George Saintsbury

“The Best of Midnight Friends”—Repplier, In the Dozy Hours and Other Papers

Sidebar: “That ‘Topaze’ Cross”—Repplier

Austin Dobson’s Introductions ............................................... 236

“The Study of Intricate Character”—Austin Dobson on Pride and Prejudice

“The Standard by Which We Judge It”—Austin Dobson on Sense and Sensibility

“Justified by Her Results”—Austin Dobson on Emma

“Neither as Brilliant as Eliza Bennet Nor as Animated as Emma Woodhouse”—Austin Dobson on Mansfield Park

“The Accident of Posthumous Publication”—Austin Dobson on Northanger Abbey and Persuasion

Century’s End ................................................................. 243

“Priceless Illustrations of the Species”—Repplier, Essays in Idleness

Sidebar: “A Real, a Free, a Complex Being”—Hiram M. Stanley

Jane Austen—William Edward Simonds, An Introduction to the Study of English Fiction

Sidebar: “I Want to Dig Her Up and Hit Her Over the Skull with Her Own Shin-Bone!”—Mark Twain

Sidebar: A Monument to Jane Austen—The Critic, 26 March 1898

“An Entirely New Note in Fiction”—James Oliphant

3. Jane Austen Enters the Academy ....................................... 253

Worthy of Study ............................................................. 253

“A Long Step Forward in the Novelist’s Art”—Francis Hovey Stoddard, The Evolution of the English Novel

Facsimile: Verse by Jane Austen on an Eastbourne marriage announcement

“Jane Austen: A Lecture”—A. C. Bradley

Sidebar: “Our Dear, Everybody’s Dear, Jane”—Henry James

“The New Wind of the Spirit”—George Saintsbury, The English Novel
Sidebar: “To Study the Craft”—Percy Lubbock

A Scholarly Edition .......................................................... 273

“A Change Which Is Hardly a Change”—R. W. Chapman

“A Sedulously Overpraised Writer”—George Sampson, The Bookman, January 1924

Sidebar: “This Letter Was Cut Up in 1869”—R. W. Chapman

Before the Royal Society of Literature .................................. 280

“Characteristically English”—Caroline Spurgeon, 23 February 1927 address

Sidebar: “Sealed of the Tribe of Jane”—Margaret Woods

Jane Austen: A Depreciation—H. W. Garrod, 23 May 1928 address

Sidebar: “The Rarest and Most Difficult Art”—Laurence Binyon

Jane Austen: A Reply to Mr. Garrod—Chapman, 20 November 1929 address

Sidebar: “And So It Must Always and Everywhere Be”—Sir Francis Younghusband

Checklist for Further Reading ........................................... 303

Cumulative Index ......................................................... 309