LESBIAN HERSTORY ARCHIVES

The Lesbian Herstory Archives was conceived in 1974 in discussions with members of a women's Gay Academic Union consciousness-raising group, women such as Deborah Edel, a lesbian feminist from the 1970s; myself, a 1950s fem; Julia Penelope Stanley, a staunch lesbian-separatist with her roots in the 1950s; and Pamela, a political lesbian (Deborah and I were to go on to make the archives a life-long commitment). Here in embryonic form were the 1970s streams of consciousness, ranging from pre-Stonewall to gay liberation to lesbian separatism to "lesbian" as a political identification without sexual significance. Here also was the beginning of the discourse about memory, history, gender, and sexuality that would inform the Archives for the next thirty years of its existence.

From the Archives' Newsletter, no. 1, 1975:

The Lesbian Herstory Archives exists to gather and preserve records of lesbian lives and activities so that future generations will have ready access to materials relevant to their lives. The process of gathering this material will also serve to uncover and collect our herstory denied to us previously by patriarchal historians in the interests of the culture which they serve. The existence of these archives will enable us to analyze and reevaluate the lesbian experience; we also anticipate that the existence of these archives will encourage lesbians to record their experiences in order to formulate our living herstory.

We will collect and preserve any materials that are relevant to the lives and experiences of lesbians: books, magazines, journals, news clippings (from establishment, feminist or lesbian media), bibliographies, photos, historical information, tapes, films, diaries, oral histories, poetry and prose, biographies, autobiographies, notices of events, posters, graphics and other memorabilia.

With its collection of lesbians speaking for themselves in myriad ways, the archives were intended to be our answer to the medical, legal, and religious colonization of our lives. Since we had not been trained as archivists, we were free to invent archives that reflected our political near past. Thus many of the archives' principles are a radical departure from conventional archival practices as they existed in the early 1970s.

- All lesbian women must have access to the archives; no academic, political, or sexual credentials may be required for usage of the collection; race and class must be no barrier for use or inclusion.
- The archives shall be housed within the community, not on an academic campus that is by definition closed to many women.
- The archives shall be involved in the political struggles of all lesbians.
- Archival skills shall be taught, one generation of lesbians to another, breaking the elitism of traditional archives.
- The community should share in the work of the archives.

- The archives will collect the prints of all our lives, not just preserve the records of the famous or the published.
- Funding shall be sought from within the communities the archives serve, rather than from outside sources.

In 1975, the growing collection was housed in the large Upper West Side New York apartment I shared with Deborah Edel. In the early years we built the collection by scouring small-town library and church book-sale tables, often finding a rare lesbian novel that had been selected for throwaway. In the mail, we would frequently get hand-made posters and other memorabilia that had been saved from trash heaps. So many times did this reversal of cultural fortune happen that we spoke publicly about transforming what this society considered garbage into a people's history.

In 1978, Judith Schwartz, the pioneering grassroots lesbian historian, joined Deborah and me as coordinators of the archives, which by then were filling most of the apartment. Since 1976, Deborah and I had been touring the country with the Archives slide show, in an attempt to spread the word about this new project. We presented the show anywhere we were asked to speak: in private homes; in bars; in churches and synagogues; and in community meeting places. For most lesbians, the thought that their lives were of historical significance was a new idea. Our message was that every lesbian life was a famous one. Soon women were waiting for us with their photograph albums or poetry manuscripts or softball caps. As of 2004, the Archives housed over 20,000 volumes, 12,000 photographs, 400 special collections, 2,000 periodical titles, 3,000 organizational and subject files, thousands of feet of film and video footage, art and artifacts, musical records and tapes, posters and t-shirts, buttons, and personal memorabilia such as the uniform a lesbian medic wore in the Vietnam War and the famous yellow skates Maxine Feldman, the pioneering lesbian comic performer, wore in the photograph on her first album.

The collection displays hard hats and hobnail boots of a lesbian steel worker from the 1960s next to pasties and glossy prints of a famous lesbian stripper of the 1940s. They, in turn, are joined by the Lavender Menace t-shirt of the NOW rebellion in the early 1970s. Photographs of bar patrons of the 1930s are in the same room as images from the Michigan Womyn's Music Festival. A Daughters of Bilitis (DOB) certificate of organization, an artifact from the late 1950s, shares a shelf with a Lesbian Avengers poster, an artifact from the American urban 1990s. A copy of "Women-Identified Women," the manifesto of the early days of lesbian feminism, lies next to an album cover featuring the smiling boyish face of Billy Tipton, the jazz musician who was born a woman but passed as a man for most of his life.

In 1980, the Archives was incorporated as the Lesbian Educational Herstory Foundation, Inc., a not-for-profit foundation, and in 1992, after a national grassroots fund-raising campaign, the collection moved to its present home in Park Slope, Brooklyn—a four-story limestone building, the culmination of the dreams of communal liberation fostered by the social change movements of the 1960s.

INTRODUCTION TO THE COLLECTION

Overview

It took women with foresight and determination to attain this heritage which is now ours....Nothing was ever accomplished by hiding in a dark corner. Why not discard the hermitage for the heritage that awaits any red-blooded American woman who dares to claim it?

Del Martin, *The Ladder*¹

The development of lesbian organizations in the United States in the second half of the twentieth century was made possible in large part by the sacrifices and social changes demanded during World War II. Young American women and men mobilized for the war effort; their mobilizations meant dislocations of all sorts, especially for women, who ventured forth to join the military or take wartime jobs previously unavailable to them. Postwar, some did not return to their hometowns. Instead, thousands of women created new lives and loves in places like Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, New York, and Philadelphia.²

Some women left home in search of all-female settings, hoping to explore and fulfill lifelong but forbidden desires. Others learned to their surprise that, unmoored from traditional locations and expectations, they found other women attractive. The ability to follow one's heart and earn at least a basic living, independent of men and free of conventional female social roles, opened up new worlds for many women—exciting worlds that had been glimpsed previously only in the pages of sensational books like Radclyffe Hall's The Well of Loneliness.³

One woman whose well-known pseudonym is an anagram of “lesbian” left her family's farm outside the San Francisco Bay area in 1945 and fled to Los Angeles. There she found both a slow-paced secretarial job at one of the largest movie studios in Hollywood and the gay LA scene. An avid reader and aspiring writer, she decided to take advantage of the resources and time available to her at work and start a newsletter for gay women. By June, 1947, she produced the first issue of Vice Versa, which she meticulously typed on her Underwood manual, creating eleven carbon copies for each original. Soon, Lisa Ben was distributing her newsletter to the women she met at the If Club and other gay bars. Copying information she found in entertainment industry dailies and other sources, then adding some of her own poetry and short stories, the new editor kept the publication going for eight issues but soon tired of the work involved. The loss of her job at RKO, plus the addition of scores of new lesbian friends in her life, spelled the end of Vice Versa. She had found an effective way to make new friends and she was enjoying them so much that she didn't need to keep the newsletter going.

Unbeknownst to Lisa Ben in 1947, however, she had made history: Vice Versa is the first known newsletter published by and for lesbians in the United States. It started a long and proud tradition of lesbians offering social services, sharing political and cultural commentary, and creating community through the print media.⁴

The Rise of Lesbian Rights Organizing

For San Franciscans Phyllis Lyon and Del Martin eight years later, the desire to meet other women also was the motivation for taking action. They had met at work in Seattle in 1950, fallen in love, and started living together in San Francisco on Valentine's Day, 1953. They found jobs and jointly purchased a small house perched on a hillside overlooking Eureka Valley. They also eagerly sampled the gay social scene in the City. But after two years, they had not made many lesbian friends. When in September 1955 a new acquaintance invited them to join a small group of women to discuss the formation of a club, "We said YES! Immediately!" Lyon remembers. "At the least it meant we would know six other lesbians."⁵

Small, secret groups of gay women who gathered in one another's homes were a natural outgrowth of the same-sex social networks that had been developing since the 1920s in urban areas and college towns. During and especially after World War II, however, gay socializing was given a boost by the growth of public sites—clubs and restaurants—that welcomed homosexuals, although not without irritating restrictions ("no dancing") and serious risk. Police raids—often timed to coincide with local elections and recycled promises by politicians to "clean up" their cities—trapped gay men and women in a web of shame and fear. Getting caught at the wrong place on the wrong night could mean unwanted exposure on the front pages of the local newspaper; repercussions often ranged from loss of employment to loss of family, including one's children.⁶

The creation of lesbian clubs offered freedom from raids and repression; as importantly, members promised to protect one another's identities. Sorority-styled groups flourished in the 1950s as tolerance for any sort of deviance or unconventionality waned in the first chilly years of the Cold War against communism. Most of the clubs operated for a short time and then dissolved, but in San Francisco in 1955, one such club evolved into the first known lesbian organization in America, the Daughters of Bilitis (DOB).

DOB officially began in October, 1955 after a month of discussion and debate. From the beginning, the four founding couples, including Lyon and Martin, were intent on insuring that their club was above reproach; they quickly put in place policies and procedures more appropriate for a professional organization than a social group. The first eight members ranged in age from early twenties to early thirties; two of them had been married and had children, and two of the couples were interracial. About half of the group had gone to college and held professional positions; the others were employed in the skilled trades or as clerical workers. All of them wanted a place where they could comfortably socialize and enjoy parties, picnics, and other outings.⁷

But larger social and political forces soon altered their initial decisions. The rhetoric of freedom so vital to fighting the war on fascism abroad had translated into renewed efforts to establish equality for minority groups at home. Taking their cue from African Americans, who demanded that their wartime heroism be rewarded with a long-overdue end to segregation in all its forms and locales, gay men like the radical activist Harry Hay and the pseudonymous Donald Webster Cory (Edward Sagarin) began to apply the "minority" label to sexual nonconformists. Their path was paved by the publication in 1948 of Sexual Behavior in the Human Male, the groundbreaking study conducted by Indiana University professor Alfred Kinsey and his research team, which shocked the public with its revelation of the extent of same-sex practices among average American men. Hay put the concept of gays as a minority group into practice when he and a small group of Los Angeles men started the Mattachine Society in 1950. Cory's book, The Homosexual in America: A Subjective Approach, was published in 1951; it was among the first publications to argue that homosexuals, like blacks, constituted a despised subgroup badly in need of fair treatment. Slowly the idea spread, and in 1953 a second homophile group in Los Angeles started to publish a newsletter titled ONE. When DOB was formed in 1955, specifically and only for women, it brought to three the number of gay groups advocating for understanding of "the homosexual minority."

All three homophile groups developed newsletters and organized conferences and public events. They called for an end to persecution of homosexual men and women by the major institutions of society, be they religious, medical, or legal, and they sought out and formed relationships with supportive professionals. Like the dignified, determined black women and men who marched in Montgomery and organized throughout the United States in the 1950s, the handful of gay men and lesbian homophile activists presented themselves as respectable, average American citizens.

For DOB, however, an added awareness of the discrimination faced by women always informed their efforts. Although the explicit language of feminism was not used initially at their meetings or in their publication The Ladder, which they began as an organizational newsletter in 1956, a practical feminist ideology was ever-present. They utilized socializing, such as the "Gab 'n' Java" discussion groups held at members' homes, to exorcise the self-hatred and fear that many lesbians expressed; they provided informal peer counseling to women who needed "someone to talk to"; they focused on bread-and-butter issues so important to working women in their public forums and conferences; and they insisted that women who loved women were just as deserving of respect and equal rights as anyone else.

Feminism and Lesbianism

The fact that DOB had organized chapters throughout the country in the mid-to-late 1960s and 1970s meant that there were already activist lesbian groups in place when the "second wave" of the American feminist movement unleashed the energies of hundreds of thousands of women. DOB chapters, their local newsletters, and the organization's by now well-regarded national magazine, all of which increasingly included news and views about women's liberation, provided some women with a springboard into feminism. Soon, experienced lesbian activists joined with new recruits to the cause to create feminist organizations.

But despite the early involvement of women like Phyllis Lyon and Del Martin, who left DOB in the mid 1960s to make their new political home in the San Francisco chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW), an initial distrust of lesbian involvement by some leaders of the mainstream women's rights organization encouraged the formation of small grassroots lesbian-feminist groups. In the infamous words of NOW founder Betty Friedan, they feared that the "Lavender Menace" would harm their legislative efforts to secure equality. Differences in political theories and practices between reform-minded women's rights advocates and those calling for a more comprehensive revolution in both sexual roles and social expectations also inspired locally organized feminist collectives, which were started by college-educated young women in 1967 in Chicago and New York and soon spread to other U.S. cities. For many lesbians, however, whether they were “purged” from liberal feminist groups or frustrated at the inability of their straight radical sisters to understand their view that a total withdrawal from patriarchy was necessary for women’s complete liberation, organizing specifically lesbian-feminist groups became their priority.

By the mid-1970s, hundreds of small clusters of lesbian feminists could be found, in cities, towns, and out on the land—from Albany, New York and East Lansing, Michigan to Riverside, California and Anchorage, Alaska. Their passionate politics filled the pages of homespun, and historic, newsletters, which served then and remain today as visual witnesses to the social and political changes of the times. The microfilm publication of the Lesbian Herstory Archives Newsletter Collection insures that these vital visual witnesses to modern women’s and gay history now can be easily accessible to scholars, students, and activists.

From The Ladder to The OLOC Reporter: Fifty Years of Lesbian, Feminist, and Lesbian Feminist Newsletters

The Lesbian Herstory Archives (LHA) itself is a prime example of a lesbian feminist organization, albeit one of the rare ones with staying power. Begun in 1973 by women who had been part of a lesbian consciousness-raising group of the Gay Academic Union in New York, the LHA is the oldest and largest lesbian archive in the world. LHA has always believed in grassroots community control and involvement, and it relies on lesbians worldwide for donations of materials. It is no accident that its Newsletter Collection is one of the most extensive anywhere. Reflecting its roots, it includes an impressive assortment of Gay Academic Union chapter newsletters from California, Florida, Michigan, New York, and Texas.

As activists and archivists, LHA’s founders and current volunteers understand that newsletters are among the most important products of lesbian feminist organizing. Indeed, the movement cannot be understood without reference to them. In addition to the hours of woman-power they consumed, newsletters are vital tools of communication as well as the birthplaces of then-revolutionary, now-accepted political and social concepts. The fifty issues of the New York Radical Feminists Newsletter, covering the six years of 1971 to 1977, are in and of themselves a tremendous resource in comprehending the ideas and activism of the new movement. But the Collection contains much more. The thousands of newsletters collected by LHA provide us with virtual roadmaps of the evolution of twentieth-century lesbian feminism throughout the United States, and the cultural, geographic, political, and social breadth and scope are especially striking.

For example, the Collection helps bridge the gaps among homophile, lesbian/gay rights, and early lesbian feminist organizing in particular regions. There are the 1967 newsletters of DOB’s Philadelphia chapter as well as the publications of its successor group, the Homophile Action League, from 1968 to 1971. These early newsletters can be read as prelude to Getting It Together, the newsletter of the Radicalesbians of Philadelphia, which dates from 1971. The DOB newsletters are filled with announcements of local social events as well as talks, business meetings, and national DOB news; the Homophile Action League advertises its interest in organizing against police harassment of lesbian and gay bars in Philadelphia. Radicalesbians uses its newsletters primarily to advance the ideas of lesbian feminism and the growing popularity of lesbian separatism.

There is a run of newsletters (Lazette) from the DOB's chapter in New Jersey from 1971 to 1975, when activists who had been part of the New York Chapter split off to create their own group, frustrated by what they saw as the New York group's increasing feminist militancy. These can be contrasted with the two years of publications of the Gay Activists Alliance of New Jersey from 1976 to 1978. An early and hard-to-find newsletter of the Gay Women's Liberation Front in New York stands in bold relief to the extensive run of newsletters produced by the New York-based West Side Discussion Group, which includes The West Sider from 1968 until 1987. An avowedly apolitical group, it is also one of the longest lasting in the New York area.

The newsletters created by women of color will be of great value to activists and researchers. The Collection includes nine years (1976-1985) of the Salsa Soul Gayzette (also titled Third World Women's Gayzette for a time), produced by the legendary Salsa Soul Sisters, of Brooklyn, New York, and a few scarce issues of Las Buenas Amigas, the newsletter of Lesbianas Latinas en Nueva York, from 1989 to 1999. There is also the Los Angeles-based newsletter ULOAH: United Lesbians of African Heritage from 1993 to 2002 and a twelve-year run (1985-1997) of Unidad, the newsletter of the Gay and Lesbian Latinos Unidos/GLLU, also of Los Angeles.

The Collection is particularly strong in newsletters from groups beyond the New York area, which will help researchers trace the continuities and discontinuities of social movement organizing. Thankfully—because too often lesbian and feminist history is written mostly from the perspective of “the coasts”—evidence of lively Midwestern activism is strong. Early, limited issues of the Amazon Nation Newsletter from Chicago in 1972 are complemented by a set, ranging from 1974 to 1975, of the LFC News of the Lesbian Feminist Center of Chicago; they are followed by publications, from 1979 to 1982, of the LCC Newsletter of Chicago's Lesbian Community Center. There is also a twenty-two year run of the Lavender Prairie News, from Champaign, Illinois from 1977 to 1998. Publications of the Lesbian Alliance, issued by the Greater Lansing Women's Association/Lesbian Alliance, in East Lansing, Michigan, also cover over two decades of lesbian feminist ideas and organizing, from 1974 to 1995. The Lesbian Feminist Organizing Committee newsletter, from Minneapolis, Minnesota, covers the period from 1979 to 1981. In addition, we find newsletters from groups in Alaska, Colorado, Connecticut, Hawai'i, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Maryland, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Ohio, Texas, Virginia, Washington, Washington DC, and Wisconsin.

The range of what constituted “women's issues” as reflected by coverage in the Lesbian Herstory Archives Newsletters Collection is another area of interest to scholars. In addition to the larger social and political concerns of the day, the Collection features newsletters on debates of lesbian separatism and exposés of supremacist thought and behavior; calls for action on abortion, lesbian adoption and child custody, and sterilization abuse; peace activism; updates on local legal battles, usually centering on an accused woman's sexuality; national news clips; and reviews of feminist and lesbian art, books, music, and other forms of entertainment, as well as ads for personal and professional services (from aromatherapy to real estate). A strong sense of internationalism—well before “globalization” became a buzzword—and commitment to the well-being of women throughout the world is readily apparent. Increasingly, issues of health, age—at both ends of the spectrum, youth and elders—and ability are prevalent. The Collection’s inclusion of The OLOC Reporter, the newsletter of the Old Lesbians Organizing Committee, is especially noteworthy.

Conclusion

For university teachers and postsecondary students interested in the creation and growth of lesbian feminism—one of the late twentieth century’s least examined and most stereotyped social justice movements—the microfilm publication of the Lesbian Herstory Archives Newsletter Collection is an extremely valuable resource. The newsletters provide us with primary source materials difficult to find elsewhere. Spanning four decades of women’s activism, the volumes of significant organizational publications represent groups throughout the United States. Researchers in the arts, humanities, and social sciences will find a wealth of material waiting to be explored.

EDITORIAL NOTE

The Lesbian Herstory Archives Newsletter Collection offers a comprehensive collection of newsletters on aspects of gay and lesbian life, communities, and activism from the 1950s through the present. This collection represents a wide range of gay, lesbian, and bisexual experience and thought. Holdings range from historical newsletters of the 1960s to current newsletters and periodicals. The collection is strong in rare materials, especially newsletters from defunct organizations from the formative years of the gay and lesbian movement.

This microfilm collection includes a selection of the newsletters held by the LHA. All the issues available at LHA for each of the selected titles were filmed. Additional issues of a particular newsletter may be found in other PSM Gay Rights Movement series.

Organization and Format

This guide lists materials in the order in which they appear on the reels. Materials are arranged in the reels in alphabetical order by publication title. For each publication title, issues appear chronologically, from earliest available issue to the most recent.

Within a run of a publication, the title and organization name may change. Consult the notes field for further information about title and organization name changes, as well as other notes about the title that were considered helpful to the researcher. Occasional cross-references (listed as see also in the guide) will allow the reader to locate related materials.

The inclusion of a geographical location has been included within an entry if the location is not evident in the title or organization name.

Selection Process

The selection of materials for the microform edition of the Lesbian Herstory Archives Newsletter Collection was based on several criteria:

Relevancy

This microfilm collection comprises selected newsletters from the holdings of the Lesbian Herstory Archives/Lesbian Herstory Educational Foundation Inc. Selections emphasize the relevance of the material to the history of gay and lesbian political and social activism in America.

Rarity

Some newsletters were excluded because they can be found in many libraries or have appeared in other Primary Source Microfilm publications of gay and lesbian publications. Materials available without charge to the public on an organization's website were also excluded.

Research Need

Certain materials were not microfilmed largely because of their relatively low priority with respect to research needs. Examples of such materials include newsletters devoted primarily to commercial advertisements.

Privacy

Some materials could not be microfilmed for reasons of confidentiality. In the interest of protecting the privacy of individuals, a concerted effort was made to exclude newsletters that contained people's home addresses, phone numbers, Social Security numbers, or personal financial information. Examples of such materials include newsletters devoted primarily to contact club information.

Notice of Unfilmed Materials

Newsletters excluded in their entirety are not listed in this collection guide. These materials are available to researchers who use the collection on site at the Lesbian Herstory Archives/Lesbian Herstory Educational Foundation, Inc.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The project would not have been possible without assistance from many individuals. Primary Source Media wishes to thank the Coordinators of the Lesbian Herstory Archives for their commitment to making these resources widely available and their support of this project; special thanks to Maxine Wolfe for her enthusiasm and commitment to this project. Thanks to the volunteer staff of the Archives for accommodating the preparation and scanning operation while the Archives continued to serve researchers. The smooth operation of this project is due, in no small part, to Ashley Bowers, for her dedication to the task of the physical preparation of all the materials in this edition and for entering the data on each issue into a database on which this guide is based. She effectively combined the tasks of conservation and analysis to create a working record of these items. We also wish to thank Lisa DeBoer, who together with Ashley, worked diligently on the pre-scanning aspects of the project, including work on title selection and organization of materials at the archive.

Special thanks to Marcia Gallo for graciously writing an excellent and knowledgeable introduction to the microfilm edition, and to Joan Nestle, the co-founder of the Lesbian Herstory Archives, for an illuminating overview that captures the essence of the Archive and its commitment to preserving a record of its work. At ICR Services, a special thanks goes to Yvette Duran who managed the scanning operation and to Bernadeta Broda, scanner extraordinaire. Additionally, thanks to IGI: Image Graphics Advanced Digital Image Technology for their professionalism in converting the digital images to film. Barbara Rader, at PSM, first recognized the value of this collection, acquired and developed the project, and served as its editorial manager. Kimberly White served as editorial liaison for the duration of the process and developed the guide. A final thank you to the PSM manufacturing staff including Lisa Graves, James Zelem, and Michael Lawlor who smoothly oversaw the manufacturing operation on the microfilm edition.
