Acknowledgments

This microfilm edition reflects the efforts and suggestions of many individuals and institutions that we would like to thank. The preparation of the microfilm edition and guide was made possible in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH), an independent federal agency. The National Historical Publications and Records Commission (NHPRC) helped fund the project since its inception. Pomona College has generously provided office space, computer assistance, and has covered other expenses. Our thanks also go to the American Philosophical Society for a research grant. Contributions from the Susquehanna-Pfaltzgraff Foundation, the Pennsylvania Historic and Museum Commission (PHMC), the Thaddeus Stevens Bicentennial Committee, and the Peacham Historical Association enabled us to secure matching funds from NEH.

Staff members were loyal, efficient, and productive. Serving as assistant editor since 1991, Holly Byers Ochoa applied her excellent editing skills to this publication. Others who helped are Laura Morrow from the Claremont Graduate School and George Nagle and Charlissa Summers at Pennsylvania State University at Harrisburg. Erika Hizel, Pomona College class of 1994, saw the project through from start to finish in her four years at the college.

The many repositories that have cooperated with the project in supplying letters and speeches are listed below. Persons providing special assistance were Charles Glatfelter at the Adams County Historical Society, Glenn Knight and his staff at the Lancaster County Historical Society, and Tim Connelly, research archivist for NHPRC at the National Archives.

Advice came from a number of people. The editorial board advised on grant proposals, read versions of the introductory essay, discussed strategies, and provided general encouragement. Members of the board are Eric Foner, Leroy Hopkins, John Niven, John Y. Simon, Hans Trefousse, and Louis Waddell. At Scholarly Resources, Richard Hopper, Terry Lynch, and Carolyn Travers served as excellent liaisons during the filming and preparation of the Guide. Others who offered assistance include Philip Avillo, Jr., of York College; Roland Baumann of Oberlin College; Roger Bruns, Mary Giunta, Kathryn Jacob, and Nancy Sahli of NHPRC; Alan Cohen and Alex Munro of the Thaddeus Stevens State School of Technology; Leo Flynn, Gary Reiness, and Terry Wolff of Pomona College; Eleanor Gerlott of the Lancaster County Law Library; John Patterson of Pennsylvania State University at Harrisburg; Margaret Scrymser of NEH; Ray Smock, historian of the House of Representatives; and Robert Weible of the PHMC.

A number of individuals allowed us to include in this edition photocopies of Stevens letters in their possession. They are John Brubaker, Louise Carpenter, Robert E. Epler, Terry Hatch, O. J. Keller, William W. Layton, and Christian Shenk. Richard Nelson Current permitted us to include the accurate transcriptions from his biography of Stevens alongside the copies of the latter's nearly illegible handwriting.

Finally, my husband, Hans C. Palmer, and my children, Margaret and David, cheerfully assumed proofreading and research tasks to bring about this publication.

Introduction to the Microfilm Edition

Thaddeus Stevens has been called “the greatest dictator Congress ever had,” a man who in 1867 “held more political power than any man in the nation” including the president. A recent study of the Ways and Means Committee describes him as “the most important congressman in the House of Representatives during the Civil War.”¹

During the crucial Civil War and the Reconstruction period, Stevens stood at the center of the national debate over Congress’s authority to conduct the war, to determine the re-admission of Confederate states, and to establish the political and economic status of freed blacks. He already had served as a catalyst for reform in Pennsylvania’s tangled antebellum politics. His legacy holds important meanings for Americans today as we continue to wrestle with issues of race, economic and social justice, the relative weight of personality and policy in political leadership, and the role of education in American life. This microfilm edition makes available for the first time the correspondence, speeches, legal arguments, and business papers of one of the most prominent congressional leaders of the nineteenth century.

THADDEUS STEVENS AS CORRESPONDENT AND ORATOR

Stevens’s private writings differ greatly from his public pronouncements. Indifferent, not to his subject but its written expression, he dashed off brief and businesslike letters with few rhetorical flourishes. A great many of them simply recommended a constituent, or commented caustically on the current political situation. Occasionally, in the early years of his career, Stevens grew expansive; to Thomas Elder on the prospective appointments of William Henry Harrison he wrote: “Our friends who mounted the breach with us must be aided, and if possible succeed—To do this I will go to Washington—Clothe my face with the smoothest smiles of sycophancy, and try what can be done for our honest fellows” (18 February 1841, Reel 1, frame 295, hereafter reel and frame numbers will appear in abbreviated format, e.g., 1/295). As the years passed, however, his letters became more terse, so that by the 1860s most consisted of no more than two or three sentences. Their chief topics were politics—whether it was asking Abraham Lincoln to give a constituent a job or urging Senator William Pitt Fessenden to speed up a Reconstruction measure (29 January <1868>, 7/430). Throughout his political life, these private letters, in their frank and matter-of-fact tone, reflected his personality.

The letters that Stevens received provide an important gauge of the nation's response to the crises of the 1860s. Letters from former colleagues such as Amos Tuck, and Union soldiers such as James S. Brisbin, from loyalist Southerners such as E. J. Pretlow, and from private citizens such as John Binny poured into his homes in both Washington, DC, and Lancaster, Pennsylvania. Besides the pleas from pension-seeking widows and job-hunting constituents, incoming letters contained advice for the congressman, most notably in 1865–66, when he became cochairman of the Joint Select Committee on Reconstruction, and a major architect of Congress's Reconstruction program. These writers also sought Stevens's help. A group calling themselves the Freedmen of New Berne wrote from North Carolina to protest harassment from whites and to urge continuance of the Freedmen's Bureau (7 May 1866, 5/220). Yet, surprisingly, given Stevens's lifelong efforts to grant freedom and civil rights to America's slaves, only about twenty letters from African Americans are in the Stevens Papers.

Stevens also saved letters criticizing his programs. An unreconstructed Southerner from Virginia asked, "Which feeling is strongest & uppermost in your Abrahamic bosom—love of the negro or hatred of the white man of the South?" (Thompson Powell to TS, 22 February 1866, 4/994). The Ku Klux Klan warned that "thy end is nigh" (10 April 1868, 6/1109). Unfortunately, there is little evidence as to whether and how Stevens responded to these letters. He regularly endorsed incoming letters, but few replies have been recovered. Occasionally, he referred to his letters in his speeches; e.g., in a 17 February 1865 speech on taxing the sale of gold, he cited a letter from Henry G. Stebbins written two days previously (4/116).

Incoming letters preserved in the records of the Ways and Means and the Appropriations committees at the National Archives (as well as in the Stevens Papers at the Library of Congress) allow readers to trace, when they look at the corresponding congressional action in Series II, how Stevens and these two committees he chaired reacted to lobbyists' pressure. Citizens from all over the country pressured Stevens's committee about financial policy in 1861–62. When the Ways and Means Committee of the 37th Congress espoused an income tax, representatives of various groups, e.g., farmers and tailors, opposed it (2/160, 191). The committee's proposal of the Legal Tender Act, a matter of monetary policy, evoked similar intense response, but bankers disagreed as to whether the United States should abandon the domestic gold standard (2/156, 174, 178, 211, 228). Secretary of the Treasury Salmon P. Chase wrote Stevens on 3 February 1862 urging passage of the Legal Tender Act: "The means at the command of the Department are almost exhausted" (2/209).

At times Stevens used correspondence to send important messages to the public. His private correspondence with David McConaughy and M. D. G. Pfeiffer shows how he contrived to have them pose an apparently unprovoked question so that he could reply publicly. Ostensibly to Pfeiffer but really to the public at large, Stevens argued that the Constitution, as now amended, guaranteed universal manhood suffrage (6/524, 525, 528, 537–40); to McConaughy, he insisted on the necessity of confiscation (6/386, 387, 380). Stevens pursued a similar strategy with John Gyger, Samuel Shoch, and Harry White in other widely published exchanges in 1866 and 1867 (see to Gyger, 5/596, 603, 6/542, 548; to Shoch 6/498, 499; to White, 5/899, 918).

In contrast to the private ones, Stevens's public letters often contained the rhetorical features of his speeches. Following the Buckshot War of 1838–39,² in detailed and outraged letters published in the Gettysburg papers (and reprinted elsewhere in Pennsylvania and the United States), he defended his role in that crisis with oratorical flourishes (1/232, 235, 247, 250, 256, 260). About the same time, Stevens published a letter declining an invitation to attend the dedication of Pennsylvania Hall in Philadelphia. He could simply have written: "I fear to promise as my time is so consistently occupied by professional engagements," as he would to Oliver Johnson on a similar occasion years later (29 July 1854, 1/936). His public reply, however, went far beyond a curt refusal: "Your object should meet with the approbation of every freeman. It will meet with the approbation of every man, who respects the rights of others, as much as he loves his own. Interest, fashion, false religion, and tyranny may triumph for a while, and rob man of his inalienable rights; but the people cannot always be deceived, and will not always be oppressed" (to Samuel Webb et al., 4 May 1838, Pennsylvania Freeman, 1/200). The use of the Declaration of Independence's phrase "inalienable rights" and the antithetical wording of the last sentence are both hallmarks of Stevens's oratory.

It is as orator that Stevens best communicated with the public. From successive drafts of his Reconstruction speech of 18 December 1865 we can learn something about his methods of composition. As the first presentation of his Reconstruction program to his colleagues in the newly convened 39th Congress, this speech was extremely important to him. The drafts show the attention that he lavished on the language and on the arrangement of his points. An early draft (10/882–887) contains the main ideas and even some of the language of the published speech. Frame 888 seems to be the final draft for the first paragraph of the speech, to which he apparently made some last-minute corrections (e.g., in the opening sentence, "President's Message" is replaced by the broader "Reconstruction"). The pages that should have followed are missing, but what have been preserved are two drafts of the last part of the speech, where Stevens denounces the "white man's government" principle. In the second draft, he replaced the mild "some even higher in authority have delivered the same sentiment in some of their oracular disclosures" (fr. 889) with the euphonious and colorful "the whole copperhead party pandering to the lowest prejudices of the ignorant repeat the cuckoo cry 'this is a white man's government'" (fr. 892, 904). To this, the draft he most probably held as he delivered the speech, Stevens added four crucial sentences outlining the role universal suffrage must play in Reconstruction legislation (compare fr. 891 with fr. 897, 900, 905), ending with "if it [suffrage] is ever to come it must be by constitutional amendment and indirect congressional action" (the printed text reads "it must be constitutional amendment or congressional action in the Territories, and in enabling acts"). He also moved a paragraph alluding to Chief Justice Roger Brooke Taney (fr. 891) to the close of his speech so that it ends not with a rhetorical question about the influence of the "white man's government" but with the more resounding "damned . . . to . . . everlasting fire" (fr. 900, 905). Words and phrases that Stevens underlined in the manuscript indicate his emphasis as he spoke, e.g., "This is not a white man's government. . . . This is man's government" (fr. 896). Newspaper versions of his speeches regularly included the italicized or capitalized words that he underlined.

Besides the partial draft for his initial congressional speech on Reconstruction, a number of other drafts of Stevens's speeches have been preserved. Comparing versions of the major speeches of 27 September 1860, 4 April 1863, and 2 October 1865, we find that the final printed text rarely departs from the draft. Early in his political career Stevens claimed that his remarks at the Pennsylvania constitutional convention were “badly taken by the stenographers (as I never write out)” (to U. V. Pennypacker, 12 June 1837, 1/170). He evidently began to “write out” so that newspaper and Congressional Globe reporters could obtain the manuscript. For example, only a few differences in capitalization and two or three word changes appear between the manuscript and the newspaper version of a speech given to the Union League of Lancaster, 4 April 1863 (9/1047, 1087). Garry Wills has made clear the difficulties in determining the definitive text of a speech as brief as the Gettysburg Address³; Charles Sumner often complained about the corrupt versions of his orations. Yet, from the above comparisons we can tentatively generalize that other printed versions of Stevens’s speeches are similarly accurate. Occasionally, as in his well-known 6 September 1865 Reconstruction speech, he asked that copies be distributed to key members of Congress (see to Edward McPherson, 4/338). But, especially in his later years, little record exists of Stevens’s concern about either the text or the impact of any of his speeches, passionate and powerful as most of them were. He delivered one and moved on to the next.

In his last few years in the House of Representatives, Stevens frequently referred to his faltering voice (e.g., 14 May 1868, 11/899). During President Andrew Johnson’s impeachment, for instance, Benjamin Butler had to finish reading Stevens’s indictment of the president for him (27 April 1868, 11/869). But in his prime, according to a contemporary, Stevens spoke like a professional performer. At first mumbling, wrote J. W. Binckley, he “sharpens every hearer’s sense of the grotesque. . . . During this time he is looking about his immediate place, as if hunting mislaid notes or a dropped handkerchief with the dull solicitude of dotage. The House, meantime, are cracking furtive jokes at his expense.” Proceeding into the heart of his speech, however, Stevens “lifts his long right arm with a wide sweep . . . contracts his beetling brows, throws up and back his towering head, and with a sudden straight thrust of his long, yellow finger, followed by the whole outstretch of his arm, he sends forth, in a thundering tone, the iron bolt of his argument.”⁴

Stevens’s speeches bear the conventional references to Mark Anthony and Cicero, to Moses and Jehovah. They contain both biblical references and Shakespearean quotations. They also refer to historical precedent and, especially during Reconstruction, quote citations and precedents from legal scholars such as Laurent-Basile Hautefeuille, Henry W. Halleck, and Emmerich de Vattel. In a day when speeches were listened to intently, Stevens well understood the power of rhetoric, and he knew how to use it to achieve his goals.

He also clearly understood the power of pungent language. In an early speech defending the Bank of the United States, he mobilized biblical phraseology and alliteration to paint the bank’s opponents as demons: “If in another world, the JUST JUDGE, instead of assigning them the hot[t]est place in his retributive wrath, should allow them to choose a paradise for themselves . . . you would see these human vipers crawling up close to the verge, and looking down into the pit of perdition, where, through all eternity, they could regale their jaundiced eyes, and delighted ears, and gratify their cankered hearts, by beholding the ascending torments, and listening to the groans of the damned!” (18 December 1837, 8/606). Known throughout his career for his biting wit, Stevens evoked frequent laughter from his colleagues, as the pages of the Congressional Globe indicate. Appropriately, a recent study, Congressional Anecdotes,⁵ includes frequent references to his humor and sarcasm in the House of Representatives.

We find such potency throughout Stevens's utterances. After the Civil War he repeatedly waved the bloody shirt as he referred to our "maimed, halting, crippled patriots," the widows and orphans, victims of "rebel perfidy," and emblematic of "patriotic suffering" (19 March 1867, 11/694, 6 September 1865, 10/792). He also could wave the American flag. In a speech opposing the extension of the Texas boundary, he referred to America's "gallant Commodore" Stephen Decatur as well as to the famous slogan every schoolchild then knew: "Submission! Purchase our peace! What has become of the spirit of our fathers which exclaimed, 'Millions for defence, but not a cent for tribute!'" (14 August 1850, 8/985).

Stevens's speechmaking, however, stands apart in one key aspect from most orators of his day. His colleagues could regularly count on him to make his point quickly and efficiently. Agreeing to yield to Stevens, Representative Emerson Etheridge once stated, "The gentleman from Pennsylvania is a brief and pertinent man" (25 January 1860, 9/42). The gentleman from Pennsylvania gave speeches that were straightforward, logical (at times his own brand of logic), and concise. Supporting General David Hunter's order to free fugitive slaves within his military jurisdiction, Stevens declared in July 1862 that "I am no sycophant, no parasite. What I think I say" (9/759).

In his younger days as a delegate to the convention formed to revise Pennsylvania's constitution, Stevens distinguished between the "ornate language" appropriate to that document and its substance, which was his priority. Let us adopt the principles, he said, and adapt the language later (8/477). During the Civil War, he argued against "abstract propositions," such as preserving "the integrity of the Union," which his colleagues introduced; such resolutions consumed too much valuable time. He even withdrew one of his own when he thought that it impeded the progress of important business (see 9/256, 824). Responding to John A. Kasson about funding a Mississippi River levee, he said, "If we all indulge in such platitudes as my friend has we will never get through this bill during this session" (27 July 1866, 11/348).

In lean, simple prose Stevens communicated his passion for equality. When Congress debated the admission of Nebraska, he argued that this body had a second chance "to build a perfect republic," for the Founding Fathers had "enjoined upon their posterity to complete their labor." Abruptly he then asked, "Are we that posterity or are we bastards?" (15 January 1867, 11/459). In another congressional speech on Reconstruction, he repeated the key term law effectively and used the concept to show justice toward the black race: "The same law which condemns or acquits an African should condemn or acquit a white man. The same law which gives a verdict in a white man's favor should give a verdict in a black man's favor on the same state of facts. Such is the law of God and such ought to be the law of man" (3 January 1867, 11/431).

Like most of his congressional colleagues, Stevens intended his speeches to resound beyond the U.S. Capitol, and his mail was often filled with requests for copies of a recent speech. He used everyday, concrete, frequently monosyllabic words and balanced construction as in the following defense of his life's struggle for racial equality: "Every man in this Republic, whether he be black or white or mixed, whether he comes from the East or from the West, from the North or from the South, from the rising sun or from the setting sun, is as free and as much his own governor as . . . myself. . . . Let it never again be heard in these Halls that we object to institutions because they allow beings, allow all beings with immortal souls in their bodies, to take part in the Government under which they are to serve, under which they are to live, under which they are to rear their children, and under which they are to die" (14 May 1868, 11/899).

In a letter to Stevens, an Alabama lawyer criticized a speech by Senator Charles Sumner: "Not one in a hundred can understand it or what he is driving at." The lawyer asked Stevens for "some plain practical documents, something a common man can understand" (F. L. Cramer to Stevens, 16 June 1866, 5/379). Stevens delivered. His impact on Congress and the country came, of course, from his control of debate. That impact was powered by his ideals, ideals that he conveyed effectively, not only to Congress but also to the whole country.

SEARCH FOR STEVENS DOCUMENTS

According to Stevens's biographer, Fawn Brodie, Stevens (hereafter referred to as TS) destroyed much of his correspondence and other papers. Certainly, from 1852 to 1860 there remain only a few incoming letters.⁶ The letters that TS endorsed and saved became the property of Edward McPherson, one of the executors of his estate. This correspondence now resides in the Thaddeus Stevens Papers in the Manuscript Division at the Library of Congress, where guides to these papers indicate that they were purchased by the library in 1907 and 1941 as part of the total McPherson collection. The Thaddeus Stevens Papers also contain letters as a gift of Elsie Singmaster Lewars, who wrote the biography I Speak for Thaddeus Stevens (1947). However, a few TS letters, checks, receipts, and other business records still remain in the McPherson collection.

Our search for and acquisition of TS documents thus began at the Library of Congress. Many other collections there, e.g., the papers of Benjamin F. Butler, Salmon P. Chase, and John Sherman, were researched. We placed notices in Lancaster County newspapers, as well as other archivist publications. Approximately five hundred repositories were contacted, including major research libraries in the United States and all the historical societies in Pennsylvania. Many of the letters uncovered are, naturally, the ones referred to in the two most recent TS biographies, those by Fawn Brodie and Richard Nelson Current. However, we also located a number of apparently hitherto unknown letters. From the records at the National Archives—both the Ways and Means and the Appropriations committees, the Select Committee on Reconstruction, and the Records of Impeachment Proceedings (the latter two containing few documents)—we gathered correspondence, petitions, and committee minutes. Research in other repositories produced additional letters, including one to Lydia Hamilton Smith at the Huntington Library, several at the University of Chicago Library, as well as those from historical societies in Pennsylvania. In addition, a number of individuals in and around Lancaster came forward with TS letters in their possession. These people are identified in both the acknowledgments and list of repositories.

Because the TS correspondence is scant in some years, we have made a concerted effort to research local newspapers in Gettysburg and Lancaster for published versions of TS letters. Some already were identified in the biographies; others are new. In cases where the original letter is still unrecovered, we have included printed copies. We also used photocopies of letters (now unlocated) published in the biography of TS by Thomas Woodley (Thaddeus Stevens, 1936), which he presumably owned when he wrote his biography.

The source for most of TS's speeches, resolutions, and remarks is obviously the Congressional Globe. Researchers, using the indexes to these volumes, noted every instance of a TS remark. All but the most routine (e.g., "I didn't hear what the gentleman was saying") are included. Given TS's reputation for shrewd parliamentary maneuvering, we decided to include all of TS's motions to table or calls for the question. The text of all legislation introduced by TS is also available here.

Researchers in California and Pennsylvania searched the Pennsylvania House Journal for all instances of TS's role in the legislature during the years he served in that state's legislature. We have included the major resolutions he offered and the bills he introduced. Also published here are petitions TS introduced relating to substantive issues such as the annexation of Texas (8/627). Omitted are bills and petitions pertaining to local matters, such as the appointment of a high constable for the borough of Gettysburg and divorce petitions from individuals.

In addition, we have included summaries from all TS speeches and resolutions from the Proceedings and Debates: Pennsylvania Convention, 1837, which chronicles the effort to revise Pennsylvania's constitution. We examined Pennsylvania newspapers to determine if TS had spoken at county and state political conventions and, if so, what speeches had been published. This search yielded texts, summaries, and extracts of TS's speeches. As he became a national figure, his major speeches, such as the Reconstruction speech of 6 September 1865, were reprinted widely.

Another, but relatively disappointing, search for TS's legal arguments took place in the law libraries and courthouses in Pennsylvania. Beginning with a list of cases in which TS participated, we located the ones that were appealed to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court and thus printed. However, these cases contain only summaries, not verbatim versions, of his arguments.

The editors welcome suggestions on locating additional TS material from any user of this edition.

Description of Series

The microfilm edition is comprised of the following four series:

Series I: General Correspondence and Miscellaneous Documents (Reels 1–7) is arranged chronologically and contains all letters to and from TS, with enclosures where uncovered. For most of the letters that TS addressed to his constituents or the public at large, no holograph copy exists; all existing holograph copies are included with the published letters (e.g., 7/383). If a letter purported to be from TS is considered doubtful (e.g., 1/520), a question mark (?) has been placed before the number 1 in the index (see below, Index A, Sample 1). Because of TS's exceedingly difficult handwriting, we have included printed versions, wherever uncovered, that are accurate. These, and the transcriptions we have made for illegible letters, are placed after the original document.

A few written reports coauthored by TS, such as the 1837 report on supervision of college students submitted to the Pennsylvania (now Gettysburg) College trustees (1/188), are also included in Series I. To complete the record of the impeachment process, we have included letters written and received by Benjamin F. Butler on behalf of the impeachment managers in the spring of 1868 (e.g., 6/1100, 1108), although TS's participation in this correspondence is undetermined.

Series II: Speeches and Resolutions (Reels 8–11) contains speeches, remarks, resolutions, and bills by TS, arranged chronologically. Only resolutions and the text of bills (no speeches) were included in the proceedings of the Pennsylvania legislature in the Pennsylvania House Journal; wherever possible we have included verbatim versions or summaries of TS's speeches from the Harrisburg Chronicle or from other newspapers (Sum is noted in the right-hand column when a speech is only a summary). In some instances (e.g., 8/023) the Journal contains no mention of TS's participation, whereas the Chronicle does. In Proceedings and Debates: Pennsylvania Convention, 1837, the reporter summarized the speeches and remarks of all participants, e.g., "Mr. Stevens of Adams said he should vote in favor of the amendment, and he hoped it would prevail." A newspaper version of only one TS speech during that session has been uncovered, his speech on the bank charters and the independence of the judiciary, 16 and 18 December 1837 (8/592, 595). For the convenience of readers, since the Proceedings are not widely available, the constitutions of 1790 and the revised version of 1838 are included (8/651).

Legislative reports authored or coauthored by TS are obviously written and thus, by definition, part of Series I. We deemed it appropriate, however, to include such reports in Series II when he introduced them verbally, either in the Pennsylvania legislature or the U.S. Congress (see, e.g., Slavery Restrictions, 8/278; Army Appropriation, 10/409).

About thirty manuscript versions and notes for TS speeches also have been uncovered. A few undated and untitled one- or two-page drafts have survived, and these the editors have tried to match with the printed speech or piece of legislation TS authored (see 31 January 1866 on the Apportionment Amendment, 10/985 or 1 January 1867 on Congressional Sovereignty, 11/423). In several cases the undated draft of a speech is the exact wording that appears in the printed version (e.g., the final paragraphs of his speech on the Readmission of States, 28 July 1866, 11/361).

Series III: Legal Arguments and Legal and Business Papers (Reel 12) contains papers relating to TS's business dealings and his legal practice. No correspondence is included in Series III, although some letters in Series I (e.g., letters pertaining to the Wrightsville, York & Gettysburg Railroad) clearly reflect TS's legal and business affairs. When a letter contains a promissory note or receipt (e.g., Ramsey, Alexander, 1/448), it is included with the letter in Series I. Other such documents are arranged chronologically in Series III.

Except for the full text of TS's argument in Specht v. Commonwealth in 1848 on Religious Freedom (12/444) and a brief argument in Lane's Appeal (12/629), no verbatim argument from his court appearances has been uncovered. At the 1851 Christiana trial (United States v. Hanway), in which Stevens and three other lawyers successfully defended Caster Hanway, two other whites, and thirty-eight blacks from charges of treason for helping fugitive slaves escape, TS left the formal summation to his colleague John M. Read. However, he examined witnesses for the defense and cross-examined witnesses for the prosecution; in several instances, he laid out the strategies for the defense goals (see especially Christiana Riot Trial, 12/526, 542–43, 562, 584). Also available, and noted as Sum, are summaries from the numerous cases that he argued from 1821 to 1861 before Pennsylvania's Supreme Court. (TS argued many other cases before this court; those containing no summary of his argument, however, have not been included.)

Series IV: Congressional Committee Minutes (Reel 12) consists of four parts: Ways and Means Committee minutes (12.1 in index); Appropriations Committee minutes (12.2); Minutes of the Journal of the Joint Committee of Fifteen on Reconstruction (12.3); and Impeachment of Andrew Johnson, managers' minutes (12.4).

Minutes of the Ways and Means and Appropriations committees (February 1860–July 1861, Series IV, 12.1; December 1865–July 1868, 12.2), although incomplete, indicate the votes taken and which days TS attended (note his presence in the summer of 1868 when his health was failing measurably). Printed pages from Benjamin J. Kendrick's Journal of the Joint Committee of Fifteen on Reconstruction (New York, 1914) give the full text of resolutions and bills that the committee considered and then rejected or adopted. While minutes from the Journal of the Impeachment Managers contain no committee discussions, they describe the witnesses examined, the decisions reached, and the strategy discussed after impeachment essentially failed on 16 May 1868. Although frequently absent, TS was present on 15 July to vote that the committee be discharged from "the further consideration of the subject of alleged corruption" (12/4, 58).

Editing Principles: Using the Indexes

Users of this microfilm edition will be able to locate documents by referring to Indexes A and B. Index A primarily includes correspondence and miscellaneous written documents. It is arranged alphabetically by correspondent in the case of letters, or by name of company or individual. Jointly written letters are indexed by each writer or recipient. Index B contains mostly speeches and oral legal arguments and is arranged alphabetically by speech topic or by name of legal case. A speech may be listed more than once if more than one topic is involved, e.g., Army Appropriation and Black Soldiers. Drafts of speeches are also included in Index B. Occasionally, targets filmed with the document provide names, dates, and other information that do not conform with data in the indexes; the information in the indexes is correct (see Errata on Film and Documents Not Filmed, pp. 31–33).

Since the indexes are inextricably connected with the editing principles adopted for this project, these principles are explained below.

SERIES I: GENERAL CORRESPONDENCE AND MISCELLANEOUS DOCUMENTS

05/1102 2 Browning, Orville H.> 08 02 67 Wash LS 2p+Encs,Env DNA

Reel and Frame

05/1102 = Reel 5, frame 1102. Frame number indicates the first page of the document.

Direction of Correspondence

1 = From TS; 2 = To TS

?1 or ?2 = uncertainty as to whether document was sent to or received by TS

– = Nondirectional document, such as a property deed, signed by TS

Names of Correspondents

A question mark (?) before the last name or after the first name indicates uncertainty as to its spelling. Angle brackets indicate the following:

Orville H.> = first name supplied by the editors, e.g., Orville for O. in the signature

<Browning = last name supplied by the editors, e.g., Browning for a letter signed simply Orville

<Browning,Orville H.> = both names supplied by the editors

Names are generally listed as spelled by the writer, with the exception of women whose names later changed after marriage and are listed by their last married name or as they appear in the National Union Catalog (NUC), if applicable. Thus, Vinnie Ream appears as <Hoxie, Vinnie Ream. Individuals who spelled their names more than one way are listed according to the more frequent spelling. Each signer or addressee's name is supplied in cases of joint letters.

Personal titles have been omitted except when the first name is missing and the title could provide some clue as to the identity of the writer or recipient, e.g., Burghardt, Miss. The designation Jr or Sr may have been added, with an angle bracket, to distinguish one correspondent from another, e.g., Stevens, Thaddeus Jr>. Periods have been dropped from Jr and Sr for reasons of space.

Letters with no signature and closing with a pen name, such as "Patriot," are indexed alphabetically by pen name at the beginning of the index. Letters with no signature are indexed No Signature.

TS's letters to unidentified persons appear as Dear Sir, Dear Editor, etc. If no salutation exists, the letter is indexed under No Addressee.

Letters from organizations are listed by both organization name and individual signer. Occasionally the order of words in an organization's title has been rearranged in order to index it with organizations with similar titles, e.g., PA Citizens rather than Citizens of PA.

Letters to or from newspapers are listed by city, e.g., Lanc Eve Express, Eds.; letters to or from railroad companies are listed under RR, e.g., RR,Cleveland & Mahoning.

Date

08 02 67 = 8 February 1867, the date the letter was written

Angle brackets are added when any part of the date is supplied by the editors, e.g., <08>02 67. Double question marks (??) are added when the date is unknown. If an undated letter has been dated shortly before or after a certain date, the date is listed as <-08 02 67> or <+08 02 67>.

All undated letters appear at the end of the month or year that has been assigned to the letter. Any correspondence bearing two dates is entered under each date but with the same frame number to indicate that the letter is one document. A postscript (PS) written on the same date is not noted. If the enclosure to a letter consists of another letter written to TS, it is accessioned separately, giving the reel and frame number where it begins.

Place

Wash = Washington, DC, the place where the letter originated

The place of origin appears within angle brackets, e.g., <Wash>, if the place is not written on the letter but the writer is known to have been at that place on that date. If the writer gives only a street address and no city but the city has been ascertained by the editors, the city name is provided within angle brackets. If the place of origin of a letter is not given and cannot be determined, N.P. (no place) appears. If the place is given but is not legible, a ?? appears.

Well-known cities, such as Philadelphia, Atlanta, Boston, or London appear without states or countries. All other cities or towns with no state designation are located in Pennsylvania, e.g., Mechanicsburg. States or countries, if missing from the address, have been added, e.g., Oakville MD. If the state or the city cannot be determined, e.g., Hillsboro, it appears as either Hillsboro OH? or Hillsboro ?? Postal code abbreviations have been used for all states. In a few cases, a place has been given its modern spelling, e.g., Pittsburgh instead of Pittsburg, PA. Places in U.S. territories are given the name of the state in which they are presently located.

Document Type

LS = letter signed; other category abbreviations are given below (see Abbreviations, pp. 17–18).

Document Length and Other Information

2p+Encs,Env = two pages plus enclosures and envelope

Pages refer to the number of pages in the original printed document, including the title page of pamphlets. For newspaper documents, which may have been reformatted for reading ease, the page number refers to the number of microfilm frames. Additional details about the document appear following the page length (see Abbreviations, pp. 17–18). This column also notes when a letter is only a recommendation or an introduction with no other information (e.g., see TS letters to Stanton and Lincoln).

Repositories

The final column lists the name of the repository or source of the original or best extant copy of the document. NUC repository abbreviations are used. Thus, the Thaddeus Stevens Papers collection at the Library of Congress is listed simply as DLC. All other holdings there bear the name of the collection, e.g., DLC-Web for DLC Webster (see Repositories, pp. 27–29). Printed source abbreviations are given in Abbreviations, pp. 18–20.

SERIES II: SPEECHES AND RESOLUTIONS

INDEX B, SAMPLE 1

10/0374 RR,N Pacific 23 05 64 Wash HR 483 Sp 1p B Gl

Reel and Frame

Since a speech may contain more than one topic, the reel and frame numbers indicate the point at which TS first speaks on the topic listed, not necessarily the beginning of the document.

Date and Place

This information is generally the same as for written documents, as explained above (see Index A, Sample 1).

Topic

RR,N Pacific = Speech topic

Topics appear alphabetically by subject. Words sometimes have been rearranged to produce groupings by topic category, such as RR (railroad), in the above example. Subject entries have been edited for consistency to enable the user to find virtually everything on a given topic, and cross-references have been added to facilitate comparisons and linkages, e.g., 13th Amendment, see Emancipation. If several substantive topics are covered in a given speech on the same occasion, each topic will appear in a separate index entry according to the frame number in which each topic begins. Titles in quotes, e.g., "Tax Bill," are those appearing on the documents, usually TS speeches, supplied by TS or the publisher.

Bill or Report Number

Information on the bill or report number is included to provide detail and to trace TS's role in any given piece of legislation. For example, from 1866 to 1868 the House considered several Reconstruction bills, bearing the same name but different numbers, in one session.

Speech Type

Most speeches are listed simply as Sp; Pamphlets and Drafts (Pamp, AMs) have been accessioned separately.

Type of Action

The column following the number of document pages indicates any special notations regarding that speech, in the above example, B = bill introduced. To provide users with the full history of a piece of legislation, an entry for the date on which TS first introduced it also is included. No notations indicate an average or longer length speech of some substance. Short speeches, up to a few sentences in length, are labeled Rem for remarks. Brief remarks of a procedural nature only, such as "I move to table the resolution," even when continued over several pages, are labeled Proc (see Abbreviations, pp. 17-18).

Source

The last column lists the repository or publication that is the source of the document (see Repositories, pp. 27-29; Abbreviations, pp. 18-20).

SERIES III: LEGAL ARGUMENTS AND LEGAL AND BUSINESS PAPERS

12/0023 - Maria Furnace 15 06 25 Adams Co D 54p DLC

Almost all legal and business documents are found on Reel 12 in Series III, represented by 12/.... in the reel and frame number entry. Legal papers may appear singly or, for the convenience of the user, in groupings according to business ventures, legal cases, or bank books. In this example, all papers pertaining to TS's Maria Furnace have been collected and indexed according to the date and place of the first document in the grouping. Here, the Maria Furnace grouping is part of a larger grouping entitled "Paxton-Stevens Business," which begins at an earlier date. When there are well-defined subgroups, as in this case, or multiple sources of documents, each is given an index entry.

12/3396 CmmnwIth v Lightner — 05 45 H'burg Sp 1p Agt Sum 9 W&S

Dating is sometimes approximate for legal arguments that may have been recorded only by court session or month at the time the decision was issued, not when TS actually argued the case. Following the number of pages, any additional information is given such as Note, Deed, Check, or Agt Sum (argument summary), as in the above example. While the reel and frame numbers point to TS's speech, additional pages often have been filmed to provide context and complete the document. The last column refers to the volume number (when applicable) and the source in which a legal case can be located (see Abbreviations, p. 20).

SERIES IV: CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE MINUTES

12.4/42 Impeachment Mgrs Comm 26 05 68 Wash Sp 1p Sum DNA

All documents in this series are on Reel 12, represented by 12.1, 12.2, 12.3, and 12.4 in the reel number column; the digit following the slash (/) refers to the frame number within the section. In Section 12.2, the frame numbers are quite faint, as in the original microfilm. Also, since there are more than one hundred frames in this section, there is space for only the last two digits in the index entries. Users therefore may find it easier to locate documents in Section 12.2 by following the chronological order.

For all Series IV minutes, index entries indicate the dates when TS was present at the recorded meetings. All committee minutes are summaries of the proceedings rather than verbatim transcripts of participants' remarks.

TECHNICAL NOTE

Users may occasionally encounter a half frame followed by the full frame. Such an occurrence merely indicates a splice, and readers should proceed to the next frame.

About the Editors

BEVERLY WILSON PALMER is editor of the Thaddeus Stevens Papers at Pomona College in Claremont, California, where she also directs the college's writing program. Previously, she edited the microfilm edition of the Charles Sumner Papers as well as The Selected Letters of Charles Sumner (1990). She has published articles about Abigail Adams, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Charles Sumner, and Thaddeus Stevens. She is a graduate of William and Mary College and the University of California, Berkeley.

HOLLY BYERS OCHOA is assistant editor of the Thaddeus Stevens Papers. She holds a B.A. in liberal arts from Reed College and an M.A. in history from the City University of New York. She edited and wrote for various government and scholarly publications prior to joining the staff of the Thaddeus Stevens Papers.
