Notes to Researcher

This collection was filmed from the repository copy of the papers that were acquired in 1970 from Ida Cullen, widow of Countee, and described in NUCMC under entry for 72-853. Part of said collection had been on deposit at the Fisk University and was described in NUCMC as MS61-1297.

A combination of alphabetical, chronological, and topical arrangements has been used. In each series the items of Countee Cullen are first, followed by those of Frederick Asbury Cullen and finally by those of Ida Cullen. Incoming and outgoing correspondence is interfiled. The correspondence of Countee Cullen is arranged so that family and business correspondence pertaining to employment and residence precedes the general A-Z listing of the items by the correspondent or topic. The correspondence of Frederick Cullen is arranged chronologically, with that of Ida Cullen organized chronologically and by topic.

The Index of Correspondents includes name, inclusive dates (by year), number of items (enclosed within parentheses), role number of microfilm (indicated by roman numerals), box number indicated by "B" before the number, and folder number preceded by "F".

Copyright to the Papers of Countee Cullen, 1921-1969 has not been assigned to the Amistad Research Center. It is the responsibility of an author to secure permission for publication from the holder of the copyright to any material contained in this collection.

Biographical Notes—Countee Cullen¹

A leading figure of the 1920s Harlem Renaissance, lyric poet, playwright, and novelist, Countee Cullen attempted to downplay the element of race and preferred to be known as a poet rather than as a Negro poet.

- 1903 May 30²: born to Elizabeth Lucas (1885-1940) of Louisville, Kentucky
- ca. 1912 brought to New York City at about age 9 by Mrs. Porter, who was probably his grandmother
- 1917 June: graduated from P.S. 27 at only 14; September: entered DeWitt Clinton High School, where he was one of two Negroes in a graduating class of 300; member of Arista (high school honor society); won the Douglas Fairbanks Oratorical Contest; editor of the Clinton News; associate editor of the school's literary magazine, The Magpie; maintained a scholastic average of 93; won a New York Regents' Scholarship; offered scholarships by both New York and Columbia Universities
- wrote first poem, his only free verse one titled "To the Swimmer," which won a high school contest and was published in Modern School Magazine (May 1918)
- gained widespread attention by winning second place in a poetry contest, sponsored by the Federation of Women's Clubs, for "I Have a Rendezvous with Life"
- 1918 adopted informally, after Mrs. Porter's death on January 1, by the Rev. Frederick Asbury Cullen (1868–1946), founder and pastor for 42 years of the Salem Methodist Episcopal Church, and his wife, Carolyn Belle (Mitchell) Cullen (d. 1932)
- 1921 wrote and presented speech that won him the Douglas Fairbanks Oratorical Contest; worked on editorial staff of The Magpie; associate editor of The Magpie issue in which "I Have a Rendezvous with Life" was published
- 1922 graduated from high school; entered New York University
- published first poem in the Crisis, a commercial magazine

¹ Known as Countee Cullen, he was the son of Elizabeth Lucas. When he came to New York with Mrs. Porter, he used the last name "Porter." Upon his informal adoption by the Rev. Frederick A. Cullen, he used "Cullen" as his surname. Sometimes documents refer to him as Countee Lucas Porter Cullen.

² Place of birth is disputed. Cullen, himself, listed New York City. Some close friends believe that it was Louisville, the city from which his mother came and where she is buried.

- 1923 first poem—"To a Brown Boy"—to appear in an all-white publication, the Bookman; Cullen was later published in Century, Harpers, American Mercury, The Nation, Poetry Magazine, Opportunity, and The Messenger
- 1924 "Shroud of Color" placed second in the Poetry Society of America Contest; elected as a junior to Phi Beta Kappa at New York University, where he was also a member of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc.
- 1925 received A.B. degree from New York University; won Opportunity magazine's second prize in its poetry contest with "To One Who Said Me Nay"; won first prize in the Witter Bynner Intercollegiate Poetry Contest, sponsored by the Poetry Society of America, for "The Ballad of a Brown Girl"; won the John Reed Memorial Prize awarded by Poetry for the general quality and promise of his work, and for the May 1924 poem "Threnody of a Brown Girl"
- first volume of poetry, Color, published by Harper & Bros., publishers of his subsequent books
- 1926 received M.A. degree from Harvard University; won Crisis contest for poem "Thoughts in a Zoo"
- 1926-1927 studied at the Sorbonne in Paris
- 1926-1928 appointed assistant editor of Opportunity under Charles S. Johnson (remained until June 1928); wrote editorials and book reviews for this magazine's feature "The Dark Tower"
- 1926-1938 Rev. Frederick A. Cullen traveled abroad each summer with Countee Cullen as interpreter and guide
- 1927 won first award in literature from the William Harmon Foundation for his second volume of poetry, Copper Sun; compiled, edited, and published Caroling Dusk, an anthology of verses by blacks
- 1928 awarded Guggenheim Fellowship to study in Paris "to complete a group of narrative poems and a libretto for an opera" (opera was Rashana by William Grant Still)
- published The Ballad of a Brown Girl
- April 10: married Nina Yolande DuBois (1900-1961), known as Yolande, daughter of W.E.B. and Nina (Gomer) DuBois
- 1929 The Black Christ and Other Poems published during his three years abroad

- 1930 barred from eating in restaurant at the New York Central Terminal in Buffalo, New York; retaliated by quoting his poem “Incident in Baltimore,” which was printed in The World Tomorrow (March 1924); H. L. Mencken, among others, protested Cullen’s treatment
- divorced Yolande in Paris
- 1931 continued to write; gave poetry readings and occasional lectures in Florida, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Virginia, and Wisconsin , as well as Canada; visited Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee, where he recited poetry and presented a sonnet to Louis Shores, librarian at Fisk
- 1932 published One Way to Heaven, his only novel for adults
- taught English, French, and Creative Writing at Frederick Douglass Junior High School, New York City; fostered literary talents and ambitions of his pupils; refused offer from Dillard University, New Orleans, Louisiana, to become head of English Department
- 1935 published The “Medea” and Some Poems [“The Medea” was Cullen’s translation of Euripides’ Medea. When later presented as a play, it had several titles, among them Medea of Euripides (1940), Byword for Evil (1945), Euripides’ Medea (1935), and Medea in Africa (1963)]
- adapted Arna Bontemps’s novel God Sends Sunday, to the play St. Louis Woman, which was first presented at the Karamu Theater, Cleveland, Ohio, on November 22-26
- 1936 play version of Cullen’s novel One Way to Heaven presented by Hedgerow Theater, Moylan-Rose Valley, Pennsylvania (claimed to be the first time “the upper-class colored person reaches the stage in a subtle blending of satire and faith, comedy and love”)
- 1940 Medea of Euripides, adapted by Cullen, presented at Atlanta University, Georgia (Owen Dodson, director)
- September 27: married Ida Mae (Roberson) Parker (born January 1, 1905), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Roberson of Kansas City, Missouri (Ida had a young daughter, Norma. In 1951, Mrs. Cullen remarried and became Mrs. Robert L. Cooper; her husband died in 1966)
- published first children’s novel, The Lost Zoo

- 1942 Rev. Frederick A. Cullen retired from his pastorate published second children's novel, My Lives and How I Lost Them
- 1943 premiere of Cullen's translation of Virgil Thompson's musical Seven Choruses from the Medea of Euripides
- 1944 presented a poetry reading at the American Missionary Association's Race Relations Institute at Fisk University declined the Chair of Creative Literature at Fisk University
- 1944-1945 served on Committee for Mass Education in Race Relations
- 1945 Byword for Evil (an adaptation of Euripides' Medea by Cullen) presented at the Little Theater, Fisk University (Lillian Voorhees, director) visited California, where he gave poetry readings; worked in Los Angeles on St. Louis Woman
- 1946 died on January 9 at Sydenham Hospital, New York City, after a brief illness; Reverend Cullen died on May 25 at the home of his nephew, John N. Roache, of New York City
St. Louis Woman opened in New York City on March 30 and closed on July 9 after 113 performances (music by Harold Arlen, lyrics by Johnny Mercer, directed by Rouben Mamoulian, produced by Edward Gross); among the all-black cast were Ruby Hill as Della, Pearl Bailey as Butterfly, and Rex Ingram as Biglow Brown
- 1947 On These I Stand, a group of verses that Cullen believed represented his best work, was published
- 1959 premiere in Amsterdam of Free and Easy, based on the 1946 musical St. Louis Woman, which was based on the book by Arna Bontemps (producer, Stanley Chase; director, Robert Breen; music by Harold Arlen; lyrics by Johnny Mercer); among the Negro cast of 75 were Sammy Davis Jr. and Irene Williams (play scheduled to tour Europe for seven months and to appear in New York City)

Scope and Content of the Collection

Among the Papers of Countee Cullen are correspondence from 1921 to 1969; accounts, records, documents, legal papers, and certificates; a fragmentary diary (1928); teaching plan books and other teaching records; writings—an autobiography, articles, a book review, letters to the editor, juvenile novels, plays, poems, a radio serial, a short story, and theses; sheet music; notes and lists; scrapbooks and clippings; biographical sketches and obituaries; photographs; programs, invitations, and announcements; pamphlets, leaflets, and several periodicals; and phonograph records. The greater part of the collection consists of the correspondence of Countee Cullen (1921-1945) and his writings.

Cullen's correspondence details his activities in giving poetry readings and occasional lectures, his assistant editorship of Opportunity, his travels to and studies in France, his teaching career at Frederick Douglass Junior High School and the friendship that former pupils retained for him, and his service on committees. Above all, his correspondence reveals his wide acquaintance with his literary contemporaries, the progress of his literary accomplishments, and his intense interest in writing.

Of Countee Cullen—a leading figure in the Harlem Renaissance, lyric poet, novelist, and playwright—an unidentified 1946 newspaper obituary reads:

He was one of a resurgent literary group which included Langston Hughes, Wallace Thurman, Rudolph Fisher, Jessie Fauset, Eric Waldron, Zora Neale Hurston, Gwendolyn Bennett, Harold Jackman, Aaron Douglas, Dorothy Peterson, Helene Johnson, Dorothy West, and others. Their meeting place was "The Dark Tower" named by Mme. A'Leia Walker, in whose townhouse at 108 West 136th Street it was located, in honor of Cullen's poems.

It was a great company of literary folk that met at "The Dark Tower"—Alain Locke, James Weldon Johnson, Walter White, Charles S. Johnson, Carl Van Vechten, and others who inspired the younger literary set in those days of creative thinking and writing.

With the exception of Wallace Thurman and Rudolph Fisher (of whom mention is made, however), all of the above are correspondents of Countee Cullen, most of them writing numerous letters. Other black literary correspondents are Arna Bontemps, W.E.B. DuBois, Owen Dodson, Claude McKay, and Jean Toomer. Other letters by poets of the day are in the correspondence concerning Caroling Dusk: An Anthology of Negro Poets edited by Countee Cullen, with illustrations by Aaron Douglas (1927).

A lively view of literary and social life and its personalities in the late 1920s and early 1930s are found in the letters of Harold Jackman, lifelong friend of Countee Cullen. In these same letters are echoes of the life led by the visiting and expatriate Negro in Paris of the day. Alain Locke, Langston Hughes, Claude McKay, Paul Robeson, Richard Wright, and Countee Cullen were among the company that shuttled from Harlem to Paris as often as possible. Other letters that are evocative of this world are those of Dorothy West, Etienne Hervier, Roy de Coverley, Stephen and Sophie Greene, and Rex Littleboy.

Among luminaries in the publishing world are Frederick A. Allen and John Farrar, editors of Harper & Bros.; Ralph Cheyney and his wife, Lucia Trent; Nancy Cunard; Benjamin Musser; Leah Salisbury, Cullen's agent; and John J. Trounstine.

Included among other principal correspondents are Witter Bynner, Edith Brower, Marian C. Deane, Charles H. Marsh, E. Merrill Root, William Grant Still, Ruth Marie Thomas, Virgil Thompson, and Hale Woodruff.

In the scant correspondence of Countee Cullen's adoptive father, the Rev. Frederick A. Cullen, there are a few letters from Mary McLeod Bethune (African American educator who founded Bethune-Cookman College). The correspondence of Cullen's widow, Ida Mae (Roberson) Cullen, carries on her husband's interests in the publication of On These I Stand (1947); deals with literary rights to print Cullen's poems in other works and to set various poems to music; forwards the production of his plays, particularly St. Louis Woman; establishes memorials to him; oversees the disposition of his papers; and details her own occupation for about five years as co-owner of the Afro-Arts Bazaar, where imported jewelry and artifacts were sold. Some of Mrs. Cullen's principal correspondents are Arna Bontemps, Owen Dodson, Jessie Fauset, Langston Hughes, and Leah Salisbury.

The writings of Countee Cullen in this collection are manuscripts of his juvenile novels The Lost Zoo (1940), My Lives and How I Lost Them (1942), and The Monkey Baboon (unpublished, n.d.); his plays, The Medea of Euripides (1935), One Way to Heaven (1932), Heaven's My Home by Cullen and Harry Hamilton (unpublished, n.d.), and St. Louis Woman by Arna Bontemps and Cullen (1935 and later versions). Also included are poems set to music and an assortment of miscellaneous items: an article, a book review, two letters to the editor, two speeches, a radio serial, and a short story.

In addition to Cullen's writings, there is the autobiography From Barefoot Town to Jerusalem (privately printed, n.d.) of the Rev. Frederick Asbury Cullen. There are also several speeches by Ida Mae (Roberson) Cullen.

An interesting group of writings are the poems, especially those set to music and dedicated or presented to Countee Cullen. These include early poems by Jessie Fauset, Langston Hughes, and others less well known. Additional items are theses and articles written about Cullen's life and literary stature, as well as his schoolwork, particularly poems by his pupils.

Evidences of the cultural and social life from 1921 to 1945 are also found in the programs, invitations, pamphlets, leaflets, scrapbooks, and clippings collected by the Cullens. However, most of the clippings concern Cullen directly such as reviews of his successive literary works, write-ups on speaking engagements, announcements of his winning a Guggenheim Fellowship, the purchase of a new home, his marriages and travels, and Cullen family obituaries.

Among the items in the repository copy, but not included in the microfilm edition, are certain volumes, phonograph records, librettos, financial records, and class cards. The phonograph records reflect the cultural life and times and contain some of Cullen's home recordings and radio speeches. Other records have a Harlem theme, and there is some calypso music.
