Biographical Essay—Douglas MacArthur

Douglas MacArthur was born in Little Rock, Arkansas, on January 26, 1880, to Captain (later Lieutenant General) Arthur MacArthur and Mary Pinkney Hardy MacArthur of Norfolk, Virginia. Douglas was the youngest of three sons. The eldest, Arthur, went to the U.S. Naval Academy and died in 1923, a captain in the Navy; Malcolm died in childhood in 1883 and is buried in Norfolk.

Douglas and his family lived on various military posts from New Mexico to Fort Leavenworth to Washington, DC. In 1899 he was appointed to the U.S. Military Academy from Milwaukee, Wisconsin. After graduating first in his class from West Point, where he held the highest rank in the Corps of Cadets, MacArthur was commissioned second lieutenant, Corps of Engineers, on June 11, 1903. (For a complete list of MacArthur's military promotions see p. vi.) Ironically, his first duty assignment was to the Philippines, where only recently his father had served as military governor. Filipino insurrectionists provided Douglas with his first experience in military violence.

Until 1914, MacArthur served in Army engineering positions in the United States and abroad. The single exception was the one year that he spent as aide to his father (1905-06) on an extensive tour of the Far East, including Japan and recent battlefields of the Russo-Japanese War. Douglas also played a notable role in the 1914 military expedition to Vera Cruz, Mexico. Returning to Washington, he served on the General Staff until joining the 42d Infantry Division in 1917.

Responsible for much of the organization and training of the 42d Division, MacArthur was credited with naming it the Rainbow Division because it was made up of National Guard units from all over the United States. He served as divisional Chief of Staff; commander of the 84th Infantry Brigade; and, briefly, as division commander. His activities with the division in France and Germany earned him two Distinguished Service Crosses, a Distinguished Service Medal, and six Silver Stars, not to mention two wound stripes (later honored by Purple Heart Medals) and promotion to brigadier general in the National Army.

After returning to the States in 1919, MacArthur became superintendent of the U.S. Military Academy. From 1922 to 1930 he served two tours of duty in the Philippines, as well as in various cities in the United States. In 1928 he led the U.S. Olympic team to Amsterdam. Also, during the 1920s, MacArthur was married to and divorced from Louise Cromwell Brooks.

In 1930, President Herbert Hoover appointed Douglas MacArthur Chief of Staff, U.S. Army. President Franklin D. Roosevelt retained him in this post until the fall of 1935, when MacArthur returned to the Philippines as military advisor to the newly established Philippine Commonwealth. MacArthur's principal task was to organize and train a Philippine army. Although he retired from the U.S. Army at the end of 1937, General MacArthur remained military advisor to the Philippine Commonwealth and was named field marshal of its army.

Meanwhile, in April 1937, the General married Tennessee-born Jean Faircloth. Arthur MacArthur IV, the couple's only child, was born in Manila on February 21, 1938.

Due to the spread of the war in Europe and the accelerating Japanese expansion in the Far East, the U.S. Army Forces, Far East were created, and President Roosevelt recalled General MacArthur to active duty to command these forces. The president also directed that the Philippine army be called up to serve with U.S. troops. Mobilization, planning, organization, training, re-equipping, and supplying his command occupied the General's attention until December 8, 1941. Although built up considerably prior to the outbreak of war, especially in their air strength, the U.S.-Philippine units were no match for the combined naval-air-ground assault by the Japanese. Having fallen back on the Bataan Peninsula and the fortress islands blocking Manila Bay, most notably Corregidor Island, the Americans and Filipinos, under General MacArthur, brought the Japanese to a standstill.

Since no significant reinforcement could reach Bataan and Corregidor—and the disease-ravaged, ammunition-short Filipinos and Americans could not be expected to hold out much longer—on February 23, 1942, President Roosevelt ordered General MacArthur to leave the Philippines and to proceed to Australia. The General, his family, and a nucleus staff left Corregidor in a torpedo boat for Mindanao; from there they flew to Australia. For his dogged, brave defense of the Philippines, MacArthur was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, almost eighty years after his father had won the medal for his bravery on Missionary Ridge, Chattanooga.

From April 1942 to October 1944, General MacArthur trained, organized, planned, and led his Southwest Pacific Area (SWPA) Command through New Guinea, New Britain, the Bismarcks, and Morotai to an enormously successful landing in Leyte in the central Philippines. In January 1945 he landed with his forces at Lingayen Gulf and marched on Manila and Bataan.

With the surrender of the Japanese on the USS Missouri on September 2, 1945, General MacArthur assumed his authority as Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers (SCAP). Unlike historical occupation commanders, MacArthur took a benevolent approach toward the Japanese and personally oversaw the rebuilding and democratization of Japan. An early equitable peace treaty with Japan was a major goal. A new constitution, a radical departure from Japan's prewar constitution, was readied in months. New laws resulted in the first universal suffrage election in early 1946. And, even today, the reforms in land holding are still in effect. Trade and manufacture were fostered, education and local government reforms were instituted, and freedom of the press and the right to form and belong to trade unions were established.

In June 1950, with the North Korean invasion of the Republic of Korea, General MacArthur was directed to assist the South Koreans with his resources, including ground forces. Named commander in chief, United Nations Command, in July, MacArthur directed the naval, air, and ground forces of the United States, South Korea, and the United Nations in stopping and turning back the Communist invaders. On September 15, 1950, the General personally directed U.N. forces in a daring amphibious attack at Inchōn. This assault on the North Korean rear so neutralized the Communist positions in South Korea that U.N. forces were able to move quickly into North Korea and to the Manchurian border.

Although some Chinese Communists had been located in North Korea as early as late October, it was not until almost the end of November that massed Chinese "volunteers" openly intervened in the Korean War. MacArthur retained control of sea and air, but the massive Chinese ground forces could not be held back by the United Nations. A withdrawal commenced that gave up all of North Korea and a portion of the Republic of Korea. By late March 1951, U.N. troops again pushed across the 38th parallel north of Seoul, South Korea's capital.

On April 11, 1951, President Truman, because of policy differences with General MacArthur, relieved him of his commands. MacArthur returned to the United States to a hero's welcome. In a famous speech, he addressed a joint session of Congress, outlining his views concerning world conditions. Although the General never again held a military command, he remained in public view until his death. He toured the United States after his congressional address, appeared before a congressional investigative committee, and gave the keynote address to the 1952 Republican National Convention. He became chairman of the board of Remington-Rand (later Sperry-Rand). In 1961 he took a sentimental tour of the Philippines and in 1962 gave his final address to the cadets at West Point. From 1962 to 1964 he wrote and published his Reminiscences.

On April 5, 1964, Douglas MacArthur died at Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington, DC. After lying in state in New York and Washington, the General was interred in the MacArthur Memorial in Norfolk, Virginia.

Introduction to the Collection

General Douglas MacArthur kept his private correspondence, including a few of his family's early letters, generally separate from his official materials. His pre-World War II correspondence was left in the penthouse of the Manila Hotel when he departed for the island fortress of Corregidor on Christmas Eve 1941 and later was destroyed during the 1945 battle for Manila. Therefore, this collection contains MacArthur's personal correspondence from 1942 through the end of his life in 1964. It also includes "VIP" correspondence and the manuscript of his book Reminiscences.

Some of this collection, although part of MacArthur's private correspondence, is official and semi-official, including three boxes of letters from Japanese, Chinese, and Korean civilians that were written during MacArthur's tenure as Supreme Commander Allied Powers from 1945 to 1951. Many of these letters are originals (in English). Some, however, are copies of official translations.

Record Group 10 is divided into two series. Personal Correspondence, 1834-1964 contains the bulk of General MacArthur's letters including those relating to official matters and extensive correspondence on his presidential plans and activities as well as letters regarding state invitations. Personal Correspondence, VIP Files includes 13 boxes of letters from notable correspondents who wrote to MacArthur. These files also contain autographic and other correspondence between the General and Ashida Hitoshi, Katayama Tetsu, and Yoshida Shigeru, the three Japanese prime ministers ruled by MacArthur from 1946 to 1951. The VIP Files are arranged alphabetically, and the correspondence with the prime ministers is in chronological order.

Series A: Personal Correspondence, 1934-1964
General Personal Correspondence
725-889	1-171	These boxes hold the bulk of General MacArthur's personal correspondence and include some official matters and extensive correspondence on the General's presidential plans and activities. A small number of these letters, mostly political in nature, are catalogued on 4x6 cards by name and event. Arrangement is chronological.
Correspondence from Japanese, Koreans, and Others, 1945-1950
889-892	172-174	Three Hollinger boxes hold this material and is arranged alphabetically by name of author. Many of these letters are originals, in English, Japanese, Chinese, or Korean; some are copies of official translations.
Amateur Athletic Union and National Collegiate Athletic Association Dispute
889-892	175	In 1963 General MacArthur, at the request of John F. Kennedy, worked out an agreement of cooperation between the NCAA and AAU in the selection of contestants for the Olympic games of 1964.
State Invitations
893-904	176-188	On General MacArthur's return to the United States in 1951, individuals and state, local and organizational officials sent him invitations to visit their state or city or factory or club or temple. The General organized this correspondence by state (including New York City and Washington, D.C.) in alphabetical order. Within each state, the materials are arranged alphabetically by name of the organization and political unit which issued the invitation. The General's replies are attached to classic correspondence. Invitations to visit outside of the United States are included in the last box.
Musical Compositions
904-906	186-191	This material was given to the General and it is usually honors him and his activities. It is arranged alphabetically by composer.
Poems
906-907	192-193	Verses written in honor of General MacArthur are arranged alphabetically by author, except those that are framed and mounted and oversized works are located in a flat storage box.
Bank Statements; Investments, Tax, Financials Matters
907	194	This is a collection of miscellaneous personal financial matters covering the period 1945-1950.

336			Ashida, Katayama, Yoshida
			This collection of both autographic and other correspondence between General MacArthur and the named was intended to centralize the communications between the former and the Japanese prime ministers he ruled from 1946-1951. This subseries is not complete; it is arranged alphabetically by prime minister and subdivided chronologically.
