Biographical Essay—Douglas MacArthur

Douglas MacArthur was born in Little Rock, Arkansas, on January 26, 1880, to Captain (later Lieutenant General) Arthur MacArthur and Mary Pinkney Hardy MacArthur of Norfolk, Virginia. Douglas was the youngest of three sons. The eldest, Arthur, went to the U.S. Naval Academy and died in 1923, a captain in the Navy; Malcolm died in childhood in 1883 and is buried in Norfolk.

Douglas and his family lived on various military posts from New Mexico to Fort Leavenworth to Washington, DC. In 1899 he was appointed to the U.S. Military Academy from Milwaukee, Wisconsin. After graduating first in his class from West Point, where he held the highest rank in the Corps of Cadets, MacArthur was commissioned second lieutenant, Corps of Engineers, on June 11, 1903. (For a complete list of MacArthur's military promotions see p. vi.) Ironically, his first duty assignment was to the Philippines, where only recently his father had served as military governor. Filipino insurrectionists provided Douglas with his first experience in military violence.

Until 1914, MacArthur served in Army engineering positions in the United States and abroad. The single exception was the one year that he spent as aide to his father (1905-06) on an extensive tour of the Far East, including Japan and recent battlefields of the Russo-Japanese War. Douglas also played a notable role in the 1914 military expedition to Vera Cruz, Mexico. Returning to Washington, he served on the General Staff until joining the 42d Infantry Division in 1917.

Responsible for much of the organization and training of the 42d Division, MacArthur was credited with naming it the Rainbow Division because it was made up of National Guard units from all over the United States. He served as divisional Chief of Staff; commander of the 84th Infantry Brigade; and, briefly, as division commander. His activities with the division in France and Germany earned him two Distinguished Service Crosses, a Distinguished Service Medal, and six Silver Stars, not to mention two wound stripes (later honored by Purple Heart Medals) and promotion to brigadier general in the National Army.

After returning to the States in 1919, MacArthur became superintendent of the U.S. Military Academy. From 1922 to 1930 he served two tours of duty in the Philippines, as well as in various cities in the United States. In 1928 he led the U.S. Olympic team to Amsterdam. Also, during the 1920s, MacArthur was married to and divorced from Louise Cromwell Brooks.

In 1930, President Herbert Hoover appointed Douglas MacArthur Chief of Staff, U.S. Army. President Franklin D. Roosevelt retained him in this post until the fall of 1935, when MacArthur returned to the Philippines as military advisor to the newly established Philippine Commonwealth. MacArthur's principal task was to organize and train a Philippine army. Although he retired from the U.S. Army at the end of 1937, General MacArthur remained military advisor to the Philippine Commonwealth and was named field marshal of its army.

Meanwhile, in April 1937, the General married Tennessee-born Jean Faircloth. Arthur MacArthur IV, the couple's only child, was born in Manila on February 21, 1938.

Due to the spread of the war in Europe and the accelerating Japanese expansion in the Far East, the U.S. Army Forces, Far East were created, and President Roosevelt recalled General MacArthur to active duty to command these forces. The president also directed that the Philippine army be called up to serve with U.S. troops. Mobilization, planning, organization, training, re-equipping, and supplying his command occupied the General's attention until December 8, 1941. Although built up considerably prior to the outbreak of war, especially in their air strength, the U.S.-Philippine units were no match for the combined naval-air-ground assault by the Japanese. Having fallen back on the Bataan Peninsula and the fortress islands blocking Manila Bay, most notably Corregidor Island, the Americans and Filipinos, under General MacArthur, brought the Japanese to a standstill.

Since no significant reinforcement could reach Bataan and Corregidor—and the disease-ravaged, ammunition-short Filipinos and Americans could not be expected to hold out much longer—on February 23, 1942, President Roosevelt ordered General MacArthur to leave the Philippines and to proceed to Australia. The General, his family, and a nucleus staff left Corregidor in a torpedo boat for Mindanao; from there they flew to Australia. For his dogged, brave defense of the Philippines, MacArthur was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, almost eighty years after his father had won the medal for his bravery on Missionary Ridge, Chattanooga.

From April 1942 to October 1944, General MacArthur trained, organized, planned, and led his Southwest Pacific Area (SWPA) Command through New Guinea, New Britain, the Bismarcks, and Morotai to an enormously successful landing in Leyte in the central Philippines. In January 1945 he landed with his forces at Lingayen Gulf and marched on Manila and Bataan.

With the surrender of the Japanese on the USS Missouri on September 2, 1945, General MacArthur assumed his authority as Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers (SCAP). Unlike historical occupation commanders, MacArthur took a benevolent approach toward the Japanese and personally oversaw the rebuilding and democratization of Japan. An early equitable peace treaty with Japan was a major goal. A new constitution, a radical departure from Japan's prewar constitution, was readied in months. New laws resulted in the first universal suffrage election in early 1946. And, even today, the reforms in land holding are still in effect. Trade and manufacture were fostered, education and local government reforms were instituted, and freedom of the press and the right to form and belong to trade unions were established.

In June 1950, with the North Korean invasion of the Republic of Korea, General MacArthur was directed to assist the South Koreans with his resources, including ground forces. Named commander in chief, United Nations Command, in July, MacArthur directed the naval, air, and ground forces of the United States, South Korea, and the United Nations in stopping and turning back the Communist invaders. On September 15, 1950, the General personally directed U.N. forces in a daring amphibious attack at Inchön. This assault on the North Korean rear so neutralized the Communist positions in South Korea that U.N. forces were able to move quickly into North Korea and to the Manchurian border.

Although some Chinese Communists had been located in North Korea as early as late October, it was not until almost the end of November that massed Chinese "volunteers" openly intervened in the Korean War. MacArthur retained control of sea and air, but the massive Chinese ground forces could not be held back by the United Nations. A withdrawal commenced that gave up all of North Korea and a portion of the Republic of Korea. By late March 1951, U.N. troops again pushed across the 38th parallel north of Seoul, South Korea's capital.

On April 11, 1951, President Truman, because of policy differences with General MacArthur, relieved him of his commands. MacArthur returned to the United States to a hero's welcome. In a famous speech, he addressed a joint session of Congress, outlining his views concerning world conditions. Although the General never again held a military command, he remained in public view until his death. He toured the United States after his congressional address, appeared before a congressional investigative committee, and gave the keynote address to the 1952 Republican National Convention. He became chairman of the board of Remington-Rand (later Sperry-Rand). In 1961 he took a sentimental tour of the Philippines and in 1962 gave his final address to the cadets at West Point. From 1962 to 1964 he wrote and published his Reminiscences.

On April 5, 1964, Douglas MacArthur died at Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington, DC. After lying in state in New York and Washington, the General was interred in the MacArthur Memorial in Norfolk, Virginia.

Introduction to the Collection

Major General Courtney Whitney was born in Takoma Park, Maryland, on May 20, 1897. He is best remembered for being a close advisor to General Douglas MacArthur during and after the Occupation of Japan and the Korean War, as well as an organizer of the Philippine guerrilla resistance to the Japanese during World War II.

In 1917, General Whitney began his military career as a private with the Third Infantry of the District of Columbia National Guard. He was inducted in August of that year into the U.S. Army as a private with the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps Reserve until March 1918. At that time, Whitney received a commission as a second lieutenant and entered the Signal Corps Aviation School. In 1920 he served as adjutant at Payne Field, Mississippi, and at Bolling Field in the District of Columbia where, while on active duty in 1923, Whitney graduated from National University and received a bachelor's degree in law. While at Bolling Field, Whitney also received a promotion to first lieutenant and held the posts of supply officer and commanding officer. In 1925 he was transferred to the Philippines, where he served briefly before returning to Washington to be named chief of the Publications Section of the Information Division attached to the office of the Chief of the Air Corps. He resigned from the service in June 1927 and returned to Manila to establish a law practice.

After thirteen years of practice, Whitney returned to active duty in 1940 as a major and assistant chief of the Legal Division of the Army Air Force. In April 1943, now a colonel, he was named chief of the Philippine Regional Section of the Allied Intelligence Bureau in General MacArthur's Southwest Pacific Area (SWPA) command. For his exceptional organization and supervision of the guerrilla resistance in the Philippines, Whitney was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal. Later, he also received the Legion of Merit.

General Whitney received his star as brigadier general in January 1945, and, in early 1946, he joined General MacArthur's staff as chief of the Government Section of SCAP (Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers in Japan). It was here that Whitney's knowledge of law was put to its best use. According to General Order No. 8 (issued on October 2, 1945), the Government Section was "to advise the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers as to the status of and the policies pertaining to Military Government in Korea and the internal structure of civil government in Japan." Whitney was also instrumental in drafting the 1946 Japanese Constitution. With the initiation of hostilities in Korea in 1950, he accompanied General MacArthur on his tours of the front. Whitney developed an intense loyalty to his commander in chief and, after MacArthur's dismissal in 1951, requested retirement so that he could return to the United States with his general. He retired as a major general effective May 31, 1951, and became MacArthur's spokesman and confidant.

General Whitney was one of the prime movers in the establishment of the General Douglas MacArthur Memorial in Norfolk. He was appointed the first vice president of the MacArthur Memorial Foundation and worked tirelessly on behalf of the Memorial until his death on March 21, 1969, at the age of seventy-one. He is buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

Scope and Content of the Collection

The Papers of Major General Courtney Whitney are a collection of documents concerning the general's activities as chief of the Philippine Regional Section. They do not contain information about his duties as chief of the Government Section of SCAP or his post-retirement activities.

The bulk of the collection covers General Whitney's organization of guerrilla resistance to the Japanese in the Philippines from 1942 to 1945. Series I contains files on persons and subjects of particular significance to Whitney's work. The Personnel Files in Series II include vital statistics on each of the guerrilla leaders.

Series III, the Philippine Project, is the largest and most informative in this collection. Messages in this series are divided into Select and General. Whitney formed the group of Select Messages after his full retirement in 1955 in order to aid in the writing of his book MacArthur: His Rendezvous with History. The Guerrilla Records in Series III are the most important subseries in Record Group RG-16. They contain the operational and organizational files of the Philippine Regional Section, which underwent an organizational change in June 1944 when it became the Philippine Sub-Division. Reasons for this change are unclear, but Whitney remained in charge.

Within the Guerrilla Records there are two large sections: Evacuee Reports and Information Reports. The Evacuee Reports are interviews with Americans, who were smuggled out of the Philippines, and detail Japanese activities in the Philippines. The Information Reports are message reference sheets from the Allied Intelligence Bureau to the Chief of Staff. They provide a summary of the message, comments, and action taken or recommended for that message.

Series IV, Index Card Files, is very different from the other records. These files were created by Whitney and his staff as a quick reference for accessing basic information on guerrilla personnel and activities in the Philippines. The cards also serve as locators to more detailed information elsewhere within this collection.

Printed Material, found in Series V, consists of published Army and Navy information about the Philippines and Japanese activities. The Restricted Access Materials in Series VI are top secret and classified documents and were not microfilmed. These documents may not be researched without proper clearance from the Adjutant General of the Army.
