INTRODUCTION

The collection of periodicals from the holdings of the Internationaal Instituut voor Sociale Geschiedenis (IISG) and the Internationaal Informatiecentrum en Archief voor de Vrouwenbeweging (IIAV, the former IAV) brought together here by Research Publications, is an important source for historical research. In 1935 both Institutes were founded and from the beginning they have been closely linked. Up until the German occupation of the Netherlands in May 1940 the IISG collected an extensive and extremely valuable collection of source material on working class movements from all over Europe. It included archives of parties, manuscripts of leaders and thinkers of the left such as Karl Marx and Michael Bakunin, libraries and documentation collections.

In the meantime the IAV collected books, periodicals, manuscripts and photographs of the Dutch and international women's movement, as its founders were active members of the movement. They included distinguished persons such as Rosa Manus, Johanna Naber and Willemijn Posthumaans-van der Goot.

Periodicals are often the only remaining source of and on a particular movement. They are the vehicles for communications with the outside world, and the platform of polemics and discussions within a movement. This is true in the case of labour history and more so in the case of women's history.

The titles in the set which come from the holdings of the IISG combine for a large part of the labour and women's movement. After some years of reluctance, the male dominated socialist movement had to make some room for particular issues brought to them by their female supporters. Outstanding personalities such as Rosa Luxemburg and Klara Zetkin played an important role in mobilizing female support for the socialist cause. They find their counterparts in Dutch socialist women such as Nellie van Kol, Carry Pothuis-Smit and Mathilde Wibaut-Berdenis van Berlekom.

Here we find periodicals from women's groups against nazism, from continental suffragist, from birth-control propagandists, from housewives associations and from educational reformers, but also a more general socialist women's journal such as "Gleichheit". The collection reflects the many aspects of the women's struggle in European society up until the Second World War.

This microfilm publication consists of the entire periodical collection of the IIAV and part of the periodicals collection of the IISG.

PUBLISHER'S NOTE

The first available unit of EUROPEAN WOMEN'S PERIODICALS begins to make available on microfilm political, professional and popular periodicals written for and by women across Europe by drawing on the resources of the Internationaal Instituut voor Sociale Geschiedenis and the Internationaal Informatiecentrum en Archief voor de Vrouwenbeweging in Amsterdam.

The women's periodicals files for both institutes have been combined for this project, providing excellent coverage of Austria, Belgium, French, German, Dutch and Swiss sources. The majority cover the period 1840 to 1940. Titles held by the institutes which have already been included in previous series such as Research Publication's History of Women series or the Gerritsen Collection have been excluded unless they included a significant number of extra editions.

The periodicals reflect the truly international character of woman's struggle for social and political equality in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Whilst voting, educational and employment rights were won in an unequal fashion across Europe, women continually shared their views and experiences and helped in one another's campaigns. Political journals are especially well represented, particularly from the holdings of the IISG. It is interesting to note the impetus that socialism gave to the campaign for women's rights, and to see how the First World War transformed women's opportunities. Women's views on the approaching threat of German National Socialism are also reflected in many of the later titles, although some of the 'popular' journals deliberately avoid mention of the Second World War even after the invasion of Poland and the fall of France.

This first unit offers 26 titles from Austria and Belgium. These include long-running periodicals such as Der Bund, 1906-1918, Die Frau, 1924-1934, Neues Frauenleben, 1902-1913, Die Oesterreichern, 1928-1938, and La Femme Belge, 1922-1935, as well as rather more short-lived titles or those for which only a few issues survive. Subsequent units will cover French, German and Dutch periodicals respectively.

Taken together, these journals open up a wealth a new research opportunities and will enable women's issues to be seen from a broader, international perspective.
