ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The materials found in these collections were acquired thanks to the dedicated efforts of many individuals in Latin America, including Carlos Aguiar, Adolfo Alayón, Marta Domínguez, Armando Gajardo, Xochiquetzal Marsilli Vargas, Alvaro Matos, Alfredo Montalvo, Lázaro Rolo, Hortensia Siles de Mercado, Josefina Vazquez, and Mauro Vega. I am most grateful to Gabrielle Winkler for her labor-intensive work organizing and reorganizing collections, creating detailed inventories with new bibliographic tools, and for training and overseeing the work of student assistants. She somehow manages to maintain an orderly and high quality operation. My sincere thanks go to Francisco J. Fonseca for his scrupulous editing of the inventories, for organizing some of the collections, and for coordinating various phases of the work. I must also acknowledge the hard work of the student assistants who collaborated with us during the last few years and made the organization of so many collections possible: María Eugenia Cárdenas, Aimée Contreras, Ana Cordovil, Lauren Hooten, Renee Hyde, Monique McDermoth, Anna Moccia-Field, David Michael Ponce, Diego Vargas. As with previous releases, I would like to give special acknowledgment to Donald Vorp at the Princeton Theological Seminary's Speer Library who has contributed to the acquisition and development of the collections on Cuban religious groups. Finally, I thank Princeton's Program in Latin American Studies for its strong support of this project.

Publisher's Note: The publisher wishes to thank Fernando Acosta-Rodríguez, Francisco J. Fonseca, and Gabrielle Winkler at Princeton University's Firestone Library for their ideas, help, and effort in compiling the information for this collection.

INTRODUCTION TO SUPPLEMENT VI

As in previous releases of the Princeton University Library Latin American Microfilm Collection, Supplement VI gathers thousands of primary sources, mostly of an ephemeral nature, documenting social and political developments throughout Latin America, often from the perspectives of popular and non-mainstream voices from the region. Many of the printed materials found within the collections were produced by organizations directly involved in activism, grassroots organizing, electoral politics, and other forms of political and social mobilization. Others were created by organizations without an overtly activist or political agenda, but with objectives linked to important areas of social and economic development. In several cases, the collections contain materials produced by governments, ranging from national to local authorities. Many have also included hard-to-find secondary sources, or gray literature, such as working papers from research institutes and non-governmental organizations, as well as relevant ephemeral materials published by mainstream and corporate sources.

The contents of each component of the collection can be reviewed in the Princeton University Library's Finding Aids site at <http://diglib.princeton.edu/ead/>. The site facilitates access to extensive, item-level finding aids or descriptive inventories corresponding to every collection produced starting with Supplement III. Finding aids for previously created collections will be added to the site in the near future.

Researchers familiar with Princeton's collections will notice that Supplement VI includes topical and country-specific components that had not been developed in the past. A notable example is the collection titled Armed Conflict and Human Rights in Colombia, 1973-2007, which contains hundreds of ephemeral materials documenting, in addition to the armed conflict, related political and social aspects such as peace efforts, conflict mediation, displaced populations, and the drug trade. Environment and Ecology in Colombia and Venezuela, 1988-2007 documents for the first time a variety of relevant topics including environmental activism, conservationism, environmental education, eco-tourism, sustainable agriculture and development, and waste management and recycling.

Three additional components, Indigenous Peoples and Ethnic Minorities in Peru, 1982-2008, Human Rights in Mexico and Central America, 1979-2008, and Arts and Culture in Cuba, 1963-2008, document subjects not previously represented among Princeton's collections of ephemera. Within the Cuban collection, approximately half of the contents consists of pamphlets dealing with different aspects of Cuban literature. The rest are materials about Cuban culture in general, cinema, the performing arts, and even a few items about the use of Esperanto in that country. Particularly notable are runs of the periodicals Cartelera: semanario cultural, turístico y comercial, Cómicos: la revista juvenil cubana de historietas, and La Jiribilla de papel.

The other five Cuban collections found in Supplement VI build on years of sustained coverage (with the collaboration of the Princeton Theological Seminary's Speer Library) of the publications of hundreds of Catholic, Protestant, non-denominational and non-Christian churches and organizations based in Cuba. These collections extensively document religious activity and thought within the island. In assessing the research value of these collections, it is important to consider that they were generated within some of the few spaces in Cuban society where civic organization and participation maintain a certain degree of autonomy from the state.

Two components which also reflect continuity in collecting efforts, and which gather ephemera produced throughout most of the region rather than being country-specific, are Gay and Lesbian Issues in Latin America, II, 1991-2008, and HIV/AIDS in Latin America, II, 1980-2008. The first one contains a wide variety of items produced in twelve different countries relating to areas such as LGBT activism, civil rights, culture, education, entertainment, identity and public policy. The second collection contains ephemera produced in fourteen countries by non-governmental organizations, educational institutions, governments, and church groups, mostly addressing issues related to prevention and sexual education, public services, and health policies.

The collection titled Politics in Mexico, II, 1968-2008, contains a rich combination of ephemera that includes electoral campaign paraphernalia, and printed materials produced by dozens of political parties, urban and rural organizations, social movements, and state and municipal governments. Also available is some gray literature dealing with national and foreign policy issues. Most of the electoral paraphernalia documents originated during the 2006 presidential electoral campaigns of Felipe Calderón, candidate of the Partido de Acción Nacional (PAN), and of Andrés Manuel López Obrador, the candidate of the Partido de la Revolución Democrática (PRD). Other highlights of this collection are the materials relating to the Zapatista uprising in the state of Chiapas, and a small section of items documenting neighborhood activism in the colonias of Mexico's Federal District.

While the bulk of the material found in most components of Supplement VI was produced during the past decade, two of the collections document the politics of earlier periods. Uruguay's Consejo de Estado: documents, 1972-1980, contains dozens of rare documents that offer an insight on the workings of the Consejo de Estado (Council of State), legislative body which functioned during the military government that ruled Uruguay between 1973 and 1985. The documentation was originally gathered by a member of the Consejo who participated in several of its conclaves.

The other “historical” collection, Políticas del Partido Demócrata Cristiano de Chile: documentos y publicaciones, 1942-2005, contains approximately three hundred and fifty items directly related to one of the most important political parties in Chile since the second half of the twentieth century. The documents, which were collected by a long-time party militant, include pronouncements, bulletins, internal communications, manuals, declarations, speeches, open letters, and regulations.

The ephemera contained in Children and Youth in Mexico and Central America, 1984-2008, and Youth in Chile, II, 1983-2005, for the most part addresses the interrelationship between poverty and issues such as child abuse, exploitation, child labor, youth employment, health, drug abuse, family and community action, street children, legislation, and policy. Women and Children in Brazil, II, 1983-2005, deals with the same issues but, as the title suggests, its contents are also related to the condition, rights, and activism of women in that country. Even though they can stand alone in terms of subject matter, the other Brazilian components present in Supplement VI (Arts and Culture, Education, Labor, Rural and Agrarian Issues, and Urban Issues in Brazil) complement each other and can be seen as a unit.

Finally, Supplement VI includes runs of five stand-alone serial titles (one published in Brazil, two in Chile, and two in Cuba) that were added because of their relevance to the overall collection and because of the need to preserve their contents for future research. They are Jornal dos Trabalhadores Rurais Sem Terra, El Punto Final, El Siglo, El Caimán Barbudo, and La Tribuna de La Habana. The issues of La Tribuna included here are an addition to the holdings microfilmed as part of Supplement V.

ORGANIZATION AND FORMAT

The collections in Supplement VI are arranged geographically by country or region, with subject subdivisions, and therein by the title of the collection.

Following are the organizational categories contained in this Supplement:

Church and Religion	Political Issues
Environmental Issues	Social Issues
Human Rights Issues	Socioeconomic Issues

Below are listed the countries covered in this Supplement, along with the number of reels for each. The total number of reels in Supplement VI is 181.

Country	Reels	Country	Reels
Brazil	29	Latin America	7
Chile	31	Mexico	20
Colombia	12	Peru	2
Cuba	77	Uruguay	3

Not all countries have publications from each of the above categories as materials are filmed based on the availability of a sufficient concentration to enable serious research, or for a specific event confined by time (e.g., elections). For some collections filming occurred before complete sets of a serial title were available.

For ease of research a detailed inventory has been created for each collection and appears at the beginning of the collection on the microfilm. At the time of this printing all titles in Supplement VI are in the process of being cataloged. Once completed, these catalog records will be available on the Princeton University Library online catalog (<http://library.princeton.edu/>).

Researchers should visit <http://firestone.princeton.edu/latinam/ephemera.php> for complete information about all of the Princeton University Latin American Collections.

A reel index for Supplement VI has been included as part of this guide. Used in conjunction with the detailed inventory that appears at the beginning of each collection, it will help the researcher determine the exact reel on which a particular item appears.

Reel Index to Supplement VI

The following is a listing of the collections that comprise the microfilm publication entitled Princeton University Latin American Microfilm Collection, Supplement VI. The Reel Index lists the country and organizational category, the individual collection, the series or subseries (if applicable), as well the beginning and ending item for each reel.
