SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

In July 1974, President Nixon appointed Fernando E. C. De Baca as Counselor Anne Armstrong's Deputy for Hispanic Affairs, but De Baca did not arrive at the White House until the following September. He received the new title of Special Assistant to the President for Hispanic Affairs from President Ford and served under Armstrong in the newly-created Office of Hispanic Affairs (OHA) until her resignation in December 1974. The one-person office was then placed with similar special interest groups in the newly-created Office of Public Liaison (OPL) under the direction of William J. Baroody, Jr. De Baca resigned his historic role as the first Hispanic Special Assistant to the President in March 1976 and returned to his native state to serve as Director of New Mexico's Department of Health and Social Services. His White House position remained vacant until July when President Ford appointed Thomas Aranda his successor.

The Special Assistant's function was to advise the President on the needs of Spanish-speaking Americans and to promote the President's programs within the Hispanic community and the federal government. In addition, through standard OPL procedures, he provided liaison for Hispanics requesting government assistance.

Materials are present on his efforts to oversee and promote the President's policies in the federal government, especially in areas of federal employment opportunity, presidential appointment of Hispanics and minority business programs. He served on and collected material from the Domestic Council Committee for Illegal Aliens and the Interagency Council for Minority Business Enterprise but these materials provide only scant information about his own contributions. He received materials from the Cabinet Committee on Opportunities for Spanish Speaking Persons (CCOSSP), but his lobbying efforts for its extension, as well as for the Voting Rights Act and bilingual education appropriations, are similarly not well documented.

Material is ubiquitous on De Baca's energetic outreach and shared goals with Hispanics and major Hispanic organizations, through conference participation, speeches, correspondence, visits and telephone calls. The material contains the hopeful, sometimes ardent and verbose, expectations and pronouncements of a minority attempting to gain government assistance and build political power. De Baca faced occasional conflict between his loyalties to the administration and his Hispanic constituency, although this is more implied than documented in the files.

There are also materials related to De Baca's efforts to define the role of the Special Assistant, the style and content of his communications, the cultural and political expectations of his constituency and his actual role in the White House. His well-documented publicly stated views were sometimes controversial and in contrast to the President's such as his endorsement of blanket citizenship for illegal aliens, statements about Cuban refugee attitudes and an Army depot layoff affecting a local Hispanic labor force.

The Chronological File and White House memoranda in the Subject File provide informative material on De Baca's activities. Included are occasional activity reports to Armstrong and Baroody,

De Baca initiatives in the White House, and information requests from senior staff, in addition to more frequent and routine queries related to topics of presidential proclamations and appearances, guest lists, personnel references and even a Spanish translation request from the First Lady's Office.

Series Descriptions

Hispanic Organizations, 1974-1975

Correspondence, memoranda, briefing papers, committee reports, organization position papers and statements, notes, research studies, proposals, agendas, schedules, speeches, printed materials, newsletters and lists. They relate to De Baca's liaison with Hispanic organizations and government efforts to increase economic, educational and political opportunity for Hispanics. Also included are reports, affidavits, testimonies, applications and background material related to federal financial assistance for Hispanic organizations and civil rights complaints. Arranged alphabetically by organization name or acronym.

Major Hispanic Issues, 1974-1975

Correspondence and memoranda relating to De Baca's liaison with Hispanics, White House staff and agency officials on the following issues: bilingual education, illegal aliens, immigration, National Hispanic Heritage Week, Spanish-speaking appointees, U.S.- Cuban relations and voting rights. Also included are proclamations, government printed material, news clippings, press releases and lists. Arranged alphabetically by issue and thereunder by subject.

Meetings and Trips, 1974-1976

Summaries, talking points, and a briefing paper related to President Ford's 1974 meetings with Counsellor Anne Armstrong, De Baca and leaders of major Hispanic organizations. However, most meetings and trips are weakly documented with only occasional speeches and a few routine items such as arrangements correspondence, schedules, programs, itineraries, invitations, printed material, travel requests, travel vouchers and name lists. They concern De Baca's nationwide outreach with Hispanic organizations and local meetings in the White House. Arranged chronologically by meeting date.

Federal Programs, 1974-1976

Correspondence, memoranda, reports, agendas, tables, summaries, notes and printed materials related to several meetings of the Interagency Council for Minority Business Enterprise, and additional routine liaison activities with federal agencies. Also included are press releases, newsletters, statements and news clippings. Arranged alphabetically by program name or acronym.

General Subject File, 1974-1976

Q's and A's, White House staff memoranda, referrals, news clippings and press releases related to the role of the Special Assistant and the Office of Hispanic Affairs. Also included are routine correspondence with groups and individuals, occasional speeches, proposals, reports, fact sheets, statistics, newsletters and publications. Additionally, the series contains OHA telephone message logs, De Baca public appearance and OPL meeting logs, resumes, job applications, travel vouchers, press releases, theater schedules, and sample forms. Arranged alphabetically by subject.

Chronological File, 1974-1976

Carbons of outgoing letters to Hispanic individuals and organizations and memoranda to White House staff. Most are responses to routine incoming mail and follow-up correspondence from De Baca's activities, occasionally with attachments. A significant amount of intra-White House memoranda reflects liaison activities not represented elsewhere in the collection, including occasional activity summaries submitted to William Baroody, Jr. Arranged chronologically.
