INTRODUCTORY NOTE

For LBJ and his administration, the Vietnam War represented a great tragedy. He had not created the commitment in Vietnam and he would have preferred to shun it, but the war he took on so reluctantly and struggled so unsuccessfully to conclude destroyed his cherished Great Society domestic programs and tore the nation apart. He could find consolation only in the hope that history would vindicate him for taking up the thankless burden of defending South Vietnam and persevering in the face of vicious criticism.

This microfilm publication richly documents the administration's escalation of the war from a commitment of sixteen thousand advisers in November 1963 to that of over five hundred thousand combat troops by the end of 1968. It details such controversial issues as the Gulf of Tonkin incident, the initiation of regular bombing attacks of North Vietnam, the decision to commit large numbers of combat troops to South Vietnam, and efforts to maintain public support for the war. From the documents in the file, one can clearly sense the growing fears of collapse in South Vietnam, the sometimes acute divisions among Johnson's advisers on how to respond to the crisis, and the president's own caution. LBJ had assumed that he could end the war before serious opposition arose at home, but he badly miscalculated. By the end of 1967, the war had bogged down, and the United States had become polarized over Vietnam as no other issue since the Civil War. Some critics attacked the war on moral grounds. Others pressed Johnson to pursue it more vigorously. The longer it dragged on, the higher the casualty lists, the more Americans began to question the heavy investment of blood and budget.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

White House Central Files

This collection of extensive presidential files from the Lyndon B. Johnson Library highlights the concerns of the president and his administration about the escalating war in Vietnam. The collection enumerates policies, responses, and recommendations from the president's advisers and cabinet members on handling the growing conflict, its effects on domestic policies, and the public's reaction to the war. In addition, this collection consists of public opinion mail both supporting the Administration's efforts and opposing those efforts.

The White House Central Files consists of materials from the most voluminous record group at the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library. The White House Central Files, designed as a reference service for the president and his staff to document White House activities, consist of four major components: the Subject File, Confidential File, Name File, and Chronological File. This microform publication comprises the Vietnam files of the National Defense category from the Subject File, but does not include the Name File, essentially an index to the Subject File, or the Chronological File, which contains miscellaneous outgoing correspondence.

The Subject series consists of essential correspondence and reports pertaining to the functions and operation of the White House; the federal government; and state, local, and foreign governments. Also filed in this series is correspondence from private individuals, companies, and organizations. The Subject series is organized alphabetically by subject title and then chronologically. The library has retained the original folder titles on the files, but a small number of files were assigned folder titles by a library archivist. These are denoted in brackets. The documentation in the Subject series is divided into sixty major subject categories and more than a thousand subcategories. Each subcategory is further subdivided into "Executive" and "General" material. The "Executive" material consists of documents of particular importance due to either their source or content and generally includes documents received from executive agencies and departments, members of Congress, foreign leaders, and presidential advisers. The "Executive" material also includes outgoing correspondence and memoranda, as well as other documents brought to the attention of the president or a designated White House aide. The "General" material consists of correspondence from the general public and other sources that, while noteworthy because it is addressed to the president, is not deemed as important as the "Executive" material from the viewpoint of level of handling or subject matter. The "General" material also includes routine correspondence from members of Congress and memoranda exchanged between lower-echelon executive branch officials.

National Security-Defense Subject Category

The file materials placed in the subject category ND (National Security-Defense) pertain to a broad spectrum of national security functions and include, beyond the subcategories listed below: the safeguarding of classified information; the use of military aircraft; troop transportation; and military operations which involve personnel, preparation, and conduct of warfare; the planning, mobilization, and management of resources and their production for such defense needs as are required for the protection of life and property by preparing for and carrying out nonmilitary functions to prevent, minimize, repair, and recover from damage caused by enemy attack, including post-attack mobilization plans.

The types of records found in the subject file include original copy of incoming letters and inter-staff memoranda; carbon and electrostatic copies of outgoing letters and staff memoranda; transmittal letters and memoranda pertaining to correspondence, reports, telephone messages, telegrams, cables, and teletype communications; printed materials such as reports, brochures, and magazine reprints; preservation copies of newspaper and magazine reprints; preservation copies of newspaper and magazine clippings; and cross references to relevant materials located in other files.

The principal correspondents represented in these files include the President, his counselors, advisors, and assistants in the White House; the heads of other government agencies, such as the Department of Army, Air Force, and national leaders of business, academic institutions, ethnic organizations, religious bodies, and private citizens, in addition to public figures.

ND19/CO312—Vietnam War

These records consist of correspondence, memoranda, reports, press briefings and releases, and other materials from various executive departments, agencies, and military departments. In addition, there are materials submitted to the White House from pro-Vietnam and anti-Vietnam War organizations, groups, and individuals. Correspondents include cabinet members, executive agency, department and office directors and staff, and a select group of presidential advisors. Non-governmental correspondents include business leaders, civil rights leaders, noted physicians and scientists, college and university professors and presidents, and past U.S. presidents.

Topics of correspondence and discussion in this White House Central Files section on Vietnam include: Tonkin Gulf Resolutions and Congress; chemical and biological warfare; resolutions from state government leaders in support of the war; congressional briefings and hearings; the “Why Vietnam?” debate; aerial bombing program, including the halt issue and negotiations; peace efforts; activities of veterans groups; issue of the legality of the war; debate on alleged U.S. violation of the U.N. charter; Chinese airspace violations, public reception of the movie Green Berets; and Military Assistance Command Vietnam statistics on the progress of the war.

There is also documentation on the activities of various pro-Vietnam and anti-Vietnam war organizations. These organizations include: Arthur Dean Committee; American Friends of Vietnam; American Legion; Southern Christian Leadership Conference; National Council of Churches; Americans for Democratic Action; Business Executives Move for Vietnam Peace; National Alliance of Businessmen; Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee; and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

SUBJECT INDEX

The following index is a guide to major subjects found in this microfilm publication. The first number after each entry refers to the reel, while the number following the colon refers to a folder number on that reel. Hence 8:141 directs the researcher to folder 141 beginning on reel 8. Each folder is located on the reel in numerical order and introduced with a folder tab. These subjects will not necessarily be found at the beginning of the designated folder, but will be located within it. This Subject Index is best used in conjunction with the Reel Index, which lists not only frame numbers, but folder titles as well.
