SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

“My [General Taylor] recommendations, already laid before you [President Kennedy] by cable, represent the emergency program which we feel our Government should implement without delay.

Communist strategy aims to gain control of Southeast Asia by methods of subversion and guerrilla war... This strategy is well on the way to success in Vietnam.

In Vietnam, there is a double crisis in confidence: doubt that U.S. is determined to save Southeast Asia; doubt that Diem's methods can frustrate and defeat Communist purposes and methods...

Aside from the morale factor, the Vietnamese Government is caught in interlocking circles of bad tactics and bad administrative arrangements which pin their forces on the defensive in ways which permit a relatively small Viet-Cong force to create conditions of frustration and terror certain to lead to a political crisis, if a positive turning point is not soon achieved. The following recommendations are designed to achieve that favorable turn, to avoid a further deterioration in the situation in South Vietnam, and eventually to contain and eliminate the threat to its independence.”

Taylor Report, 1961

This microfilm collection documents the development of America's Vietnam policy, between the Taylor Mission in 1961 and the first assessment of the situation in Vietnam since the introduction of combat troops in 1966.

This collection consists of notebooks and briefing books compiled as background memoranda, reports, transcripts of hearings, memoranda of conversation, chronologies of official State Department visits, and requests for information from officials such as Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge and Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

This collection includes primary documents on:

U.S. policy toward Indochina, 1940-1963

Commentary and assessment of the Taylor Mission Report and its recommendations

Analysis of the U.S. Political-Military Country Team report on the Buddhist situation and fall of the Diem government

Establishment of LBJ's National Security Council Working Group on Vietnam

Assessment and review of the Alternatives Report on the response to North Vietnamese provocations

Assessment of the U.S. role and the decision to expand the U.S. commitment

Discussion on ending the war and deployment of additional U.S. forces

Political, economic, and military information for Secretary Dean Rusk's Vietnam visit

Negotiating strategy and international actions concerning Vietnam in 1965

Assessment of the situation in Vietnam since the introduction of combat troops, May 1966

Secretary Dean Rusk's Appearance before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, February 1966

“Eyes only for Lodge and Westmoreland from the Secretary [of State Rusk]. We are sure you will have been watching the discussions in the Foreign Relations Committee and also the statement of Senator Robert Kennedy, with public reactions to it. We are sure that your own understanding of the Administration position will not have been affected by comments of critics, but it seems important here that Thieu and Ky should be informed not only of debates and discussions, but of this Administration's position. We therefore hope that you will make sure that the essentials of the position presented by General Taylor and myself [Secretary Rusk] are fully understood by the government in Saigon. In particular it can be assured that our position on the NLF has not changed... We share the hopes and purposes of the GVN for elections with safeguards which will permit a really free choice without coercion or fraud. What we hope you can communicate to the GVN, in short, is a full understanding of both our own firmness and determination and of the real problems created by critics here who seize upon any minor difference to exploit. The government in Saigon can rely on us, and at the same time they can help us by implementing and accelerating the policy and purpose of progressive social action set forth by them in Honolulu and afterwards."

Telegram From the Department of State to the Embassy in Vietnam, February 21, 1966

SUBJECT INDEX

The first number after each entry refers to the reel, while the number following the colon refers to a folder number on that reel. Hence 1:1 directs the researcher to folder 1 on reel 1. Each folder is located on the reel in numerical order and introduced with a folder tab. These subjects will not necessarily be found at the beginning of the designated folder, but will be located within it. This Subject Index is best used in conjunction with the Reel index, which lists not only folder numbers, but folder titles as well.
