SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection provides the basis for looking back on the essential role of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in LBJ's Great Society and the effort to combat poverty, support health care, and insure that America's students receive a better education.

Health issues

The administrative histories and supporting documents includes many topics pertaining to health, particularly health legislation; national and international health problems; national and international health programs; physical fitness; health organizations and committees, such as the White House Conference on Health and the National Commission on Community Health Services; health manpower needs; bill signings; blood donations; and professional medical and dental groups and associations. In addition, there is extensive material on the Social Security Act of 1965 authorizing Medicare and provided federal funding for many of the medical costs of older Americans. The legislation overcame the bitter resistance, particularly from the American Medical Association, to the idea of publicly-funded health care or "socialized medicine" by making its benefits available to everyone over sixty-five, regardless of need, and by linking payments to the existing private insurance system. Also, welfare recipients of all ages received medical care through the Medicaid program which was initiated on July 30, 1965 through Title XIX of the Social Security Act. There is correspondence and supporting documents on state Medicaid programs, the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS), which monitored the state-run programs and established requirements for service delivery, quality, funding, and eligibility standards.

This collection is comprised of the histories and supporting documents from the following departments, agencies offices, and commissions:

- American National Red Cross
- Department of Health, Education, and Welfare
- Department of Housing and Urban Development
- President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports

Education issues

This collection includes material on Presidential and staff messages to and meetings with students, educators, and education conferences; anti-dropout campaigns; Task Force on Education; Task Force on Child Development; Interagency Task Force on Education; District of Columbia schools; Panel on Computers in Education of the President's Science Advisory Committee; National Teacher Corps; Elementary and Secondary Education Act; International Education Act and related international education efforts; Reading is FUNdamental project; Project Head Start, which offered preschool education for poor children; Office of Equal Educational Opportunities and school integration; National Student Association; Upward Bound, which assisted poor high school students entering college; Job Corps, whose purpose was to help disadvantaged youth develop marketable skills; the Neighborhood Youth Corps, established to give poor urban youths work experience and to encourage them to stay in school; Bureau of the Budget estimates of education program costs; Health, Education, and Welfare Department estimates of education needs and suggestions for legislation; suggestions of education innovations received from the public; publications on education topics.

This collection is comprised of the histories and supporting documents from the following departments, agencies offices, and commissions:

- Commission of Fine Arts
- Department of Health, Education, and Welfare
- National Endowment for the Arts (NEA)

- National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH)
- President's Commission on White House Fellows
- President's Committee on Consumer Interests

Welfare issues

The most ambitious and controversial part of President Johnson's Great Society was its initiative to end poverty. The centerpiece of the War on Poverty was the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, which created an Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) to oversee a variety of community-based antipoverty programs. The OEO reflected a fragile consensus among policymakers that the best way to deal with poverty was not simply to raise the incomes of the poor but to help them better themselves through education, job training, and community development. Central to its mission was the idea of "community action," the participation of the poor in framing and administering the programs designed to help them. These administrative histories and supporting documents contain extensive records on the successes and setbacks of the War on Poverty programs. This collection documents the organization and activities of President Johnson's Great Society and the public reaction to the agenda. Leading the attack in the War on Poverty, there is extensive materials on the Office for Economic Opportunity (OEO), since the agency administered many domestic initiatives, including Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA); the Model Cities Program for urban redevelopment; Job Corps; the Food Stamps program; the Community Action Program, which initiated local Community Action Agencies charged with helping the poor become self-sufficient; Project Head Start, which offered preschool education for poor children; Neighborhood Youth Corps; and Summer Youth Programs.

This collection is comprised of the histories and supporting documents from the following departments, agencies offices, and commissions:

- Department of Agriculture
- Department of Health, Education, and Welfare
- Department of Housing and Urban Development
- Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO)
- Office of Emergency Planning
- President's Committee on Consumer Interests
- Veterans Administration (VA)

SUBJECT INDEX

The first number after each entry refers to the reel, while the number following the colon refers to a folder number on that reel. Hence 1:1 directs the researcher to folder 1 on reel 1. Each folder is located on the reel in numerical order and introduced with a folder tab. These subjects will not necessarily be found at the beginning of the designated folder, but will be located within it. This Subject Index is best used in conjunction with the Reel index, which lists not only folder numbers, but folder titles as well.
