CHARLES CARROLL

Charles Carroll of Carrollton was born at Annapolis, Maryland on September 20, 1737. His grandfather, Daniel Carroll, had come to America from Ireland around 1670, and under the patronage of Lord Baltimore became the owner of large estates in Maryland.

Charles' father, Charles Carroll of Annapolis, was born in 1702 and died in 1782 - a talented man, but opportunity had passed him by.

After study in Maryland, Flanders, Paris, Bourges and London, Charles, at the age of twenty-eight, prepared to take up the development of the 10,000 acre tract in Frederick County, Maryland, known as Carrollton Manor. He lived the life of a propertied gentleman, legally debarred from political life because of his Catholicism.

In 1770 bitterness over the question of regulating officers' fees and the stipends of the Established Church clergy forced the Maryland governor to prorogue the Maryland assembly. Charles Dulany, a prominent lawyer, defended the Maryland government and Charles Carroll, taking the opposite position, debated Dulany in a series of controversial articles in the Maryland Gazette. When it was over Carroll had carried the people with him.

Carroll was active in the non-importation proceedings of 1774 and successively a member of the local Annapolis Committee of Correspondence, of the first Maryland Convention, of the provincial Committee of Correspondence, and of the Committee of Safety. In February 1776, the Continental Congress appointed a commission to visit Canada "to promote or form a union" between Canada and the colonies, naming as its members Benjamin Franklin, Samuel Chase, and Charles Carroll. The story of that abortive attempt is found in Carroll's journal of the mission.

Elected a delegate to the Continental Congress on July 4, 1776, Carroll went almost immediately to Philadelphia, voted for the engrossment of the Declaration of Independence on July 19 and put his name to the instrument on August 2.

Contrary to romantic explanations of history, Charles Carroll had assumed the designation "of Carrollton" on his return to Maryland in 1765 and had used it ever since to distinguish himself from his father and cousins.

Carroll was intimately concerned in drawing up the Maryland Constitution and in 1789 he represented Maryland as a Senator in the first federal Congress until 1792, serving in the Maryland senate until 1800. He devoted himself to the development of his nearly eighty-thousand acres of property in Maryland, Pennsylvania and New York after 1800.

As a Federalist he was opposed to the War of 1812 and contemplated moving out of Maryland when the office of the Federal Republican was sacked by a mob in Baltimore. He was on the first board of directors of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and laid its cornerstone on the fourth of July, 1828.

When he died on November 14, 1832, Charles Carroll of Carrollton was envied by many as the wealthiest citizen of the United States and revered by every one as the last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence.
