Introduction

Rose Pastor Stokes (1879-1933), born in Augustow, Poland, immigrated to the United States in 1890. For the next twelve years she worked in a Cleveland cigar factory during the day and followed a program of self-education at night. In 1903 she moved to New York City and became a feature writer for the Jewish Daily News. Soon after her arrival in New York, she interviewed young millionaire socialist, James Graham Phelps Stokes. Out of this interview grew the romance which culminated in their marriage on July 18, 1905. In the years that followed, Rose Pastor Stokes became known as a radical and a political activist. Aligned with the socialist movement at the beginning of her career, she moved steadily to the left, ultimately becoming a member of the American Communist Party. Her increasingly radical activities led to an estrangement with her husband, however, and in 1925 Stokes obtained a divorce from his wife. Rose was married again in 1927 to Jerome Isaac Romaine, a Communist activist. She died in Germany in 1933 while undergoing treatment for cancer.

Rose Pastor Stokes's papers consist of correspondence, 1905-1933; writings, including manuscripts and published material, 1900-1958; printed material, consisting mostly of newspaper clippings, 1904-1953; drawings, some of which were either exhibited or published, 1923-1932; and miscellaneous material involving Rose Pastor Stokes's literary interests and political activities from 1904 to 1944.

Most of the correspondence relates either to Rose Pastor Stokes's political activities or to her literary endeavors, both of which are in general politically oriented. Correspondents of note include Leonard Abbott, Alexander Bittleman, Eugene V. Debs, Max Eastman, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Henry Ford, Kahlil Gibran, Emma Goldman, Upton Sinclair, Margaret Sanger, and Oswald Garrison Villard.

Correspondence with James Graham Phelps Stokes and Jerome Isaac Romaine, Rose Pastor Stokes's husbands, and Olive Tilford Dargan, author and close personal friend of Mrs. Stokes, is of particular importance in relation to Rose Pastor Stokes's personal life. Among the writings is a copy of her unfinished autobiography, which spans the period from 1879 to 1905. In addition, there is interesting material about her activities before 1920, including information on her views on socialism, on her participation in several workers' strikes and in the campaign to distribute birth control information to the public, and on her activities in support of various radical leaders such as Patrick Quinlan, Emma Goldman, and Margaret Sanger.

Biographical Sketch

The following biographical sketch was written by John M. Whitcomb, who donated these papers to Yale.

ROSE HARRIET PASTOR

Born July 18, 1879 at Augustowe, Poland.

Removed to London, England, in 1882.

Removed to Cleveland, Ohio, in 1890.

Removed to New York City in 1903; worked for Jewish Daily News.

Married to James Graham Phelps Stokes, July 18, 1905.

Divorced from Mr. Stokes in 1925.

Remarried to Jerome Isaac Romaine in 1927.

Died in Germany, June 20, 1933.

1. Childhood, years until marriage: Covered by uncompleted autobiography.

2. Years 1903-1905 in New York City working for Jewish Daily News; friendship formed with Israel Zevin of the newspaper staff.

3. Early married life at "Caritas Island," Stamford and 88 Grove Street, New York City:

Worked as a lecturer for the Intercollegiate Socialist Society, which was organized by Jack London, Upton Sinclair and Graham Stokes; lecture tours went to many campuses of the United States and many friendships were formed during these travels (which were also conducted by Graham Stokes). As a result, many active socialists, some active anarchists and syndicalists (I.W.W.) were guests at "Caritas Island." Other visitors included liberals, literary figures of the time. A noteworthy guest was Maxim Gorky in 1906; he apparently came with Leroy and Miriam Finn Scott, and Mrs. Scott acted as an interpreter because she, herself, was Russian.

Graham Stokes "built with his own hands" two small houses on the island; these were for his friends from his days at the University Settlement House in New York City—Leroy Scott and English (William English) Walling. The Scott house is still standing. Walling the joint founder of the N.A.A.C.P., following a trip to Springfield, Illinois, where he witnessed a negro lynching.

During these years Mrs. Stokes was active in organizing the hotel workers and dressmakers in N.Y.C. She was in demand as an agitational speaker. She was also very much involved in birth-control activities with Margaret Sanger and Emma Goldman. As a prominent woman of the time, she was asked to join the Heterodoxy Society; this organization included many prominent women from cultural activities, and was not limited to people active in the socialist movement. Mrs. Stokes wrote several plays during these years; one of these, "The Woman Who Wouldn't," was presented by the Washington Square Players. She also contributed to such publications as The Masses (Editor, Max Eastman).

During the year 1913, Mrs. Stokes worked on behalf of Patrick Quinlan, who had been sentenced to prison during the Paterson (N.J.) strike. Persons of note associated with this period of Mrs. Stokes's life, letters from and to whom included in the collection were:

William English Walling (socialist, lecturer writer,
N.A.A.C.P.)

- Miriam Finn Scott (L.S., novelist, socialist)
- Eugene V. Debs
- Upton Sinclair (writer, I.S.S., socialist)
- Olive Tilford Dargan (poetess, novelist in 1930s under name of Fielding Burke: "Call Home the Heart": devoted friend of RPS)
- Horace Traubel (poet, biographer and friend of Walt Whitman, publisher of the "Conservator"
- Leonard Abbott (professional anarchist, associate of Emma Goldman, publisher, associated with the Ferrer Center)
- Elizabeth Gurley Flynn (I.W.W. organizer, common-law wife of the anarchist leader, Carlo Tresca; died in Moscow as chairman of the Communist Party of U.S. in 1960s; spent a summer with her infant son on "Caritas Island" as guest of Graham and RPS; active in defense of Sacco and Vanzetti)
- Lillian Wald (director of Henry Street Settlement House, N.Y.C.)
- Rose Strunsky (Lorwin) (L.L., socialist, writer on economics, syndicalism, etc.)
- Kate Barnard (commissioner of charities for Oklahoma)
- Harry W. Laidler (secretary of Intercollegiate Socialist Society which later changed its name to League for Industrial Democracy) (see folder "Political Organizations: Intercollegiate Socialist Society, Harry W. Laidler")
- Paula Jakobi (H. Society) (see folder: "Medical Matters")
- Ida Rauh (wife of Max Eastman)

- Max Eastman (writer, supporter and translator of works of Leon Trotsky, attended Debs' trial with RPS, editor of The Masses.)
- Seymour Stedman (lawyer, National Executive Committee of Socialist Party, defender of people prosecuted for sedition during WWI)
- George Strobell (socialist, brother-in-law of Henry Demarest Lloyd, helped organize I.S.S.O) (see "Patrick Quinlan Legal Case")
- Arturo Giovannitti (anarchist, poet, involved in Lawrence strike, 1912)
- Ben Reitman (anarchist, common-law husband of Emma Goldman) (see "Mother Earth Publishing Co." folder)
- Albert Rhys Williams (socialist, minister, war correspondent for "Outlook," 1917, "Through the Russian Revolution")
- Oswald Garrison Villard (editor of the "Nation")

4. Years 1917-1918, opposes entry of U.S. into World War I, sentenced to 10-year prison term for seditious utterances; Debs trial and sentence to prison.

- Mabel D. Curry (wife of socialist professor in Terre Haute, Ind.; devoted friend of E. V. Debs whom she visited at Atlanta Penitentiary; RPS notes "Debs was in love with her.")

5. Years 1919-1933:

- Assisted in the organization of the Communist Party of U.S.; attended Bridgeman, Michigan secret convention in 1922, for which she was subject to prosecution under Michigan laws; delegate to the 4th Congress of the Comintern in Leningrad and Moscow, Nov.-Dec. 1922, at which she acted as "Reporter for the Negro Commission," presided over by G. Safarov – the documents covering this episode are in the collection, where Mrs. Stokes used the cover name of "Sacha."

During this period Mrs. Stokes appears to have been an organizer and worker for the Communist Party. Her health began to fail and she withdrew from active party work about the time of her divorce in 1925. She became interested in drawing and exhibited at the Society of Independent Artists in N.Y.C. in 1925; a portrait called "Anna" was done by her and illustrated in the catalogue of the exhibit; apparently she was encouraged by the artist Gibrán, who wrote The Prophet.

After her divorce from Graham Stokes, Mrs. Stokes lived, for a time, with Jeanette Pearl, who I believe to have once been the common-law wife of Louis Fraina, early leader of the Communist Party of the U.S. (Fraina changed his name to Lewis Corey and was, for many years, a professor at Antioch College, during which time he wrote a number of books on political and economic affairs.)

In 1927, Mrs. Stokes married Jerome I. Romaine, a language teacher who later edited the Communist magazine, Political Affairs (he had once been the husband of Frances Winwar, Pulitzer Prize winner with her biographical novel Poor Splendid Wings). Romaine changed his name to Victor J. Jerome. Mrs. Stokes called herself Mrs. J. I. Romaine when she resided in New York City, but when living in her cottage in Westport, Connecticut, she retained the name Rose Pastor Stokes. In 1933 she died of cancer while being treated in a clinic in Germany. A memorial service, with political overtones, was held in New York City and attended by many prominent people:

Jeanette Pearl

Maximilian Cohen (communist dentist, party organizer)

Scott Nearing (one time communist candidate for governor of New Jersey, prolific writer with a left-wing slant)

Alexander Bittleman (Communist Party professional, writer)

Max Bedacht (Communist Party professional)

Charles Ruthenberg (secretary of the Communist Party of U.S.; died in 1927; ashes buried in Kremlin wall) (see "Political Organizations – Workers Party of America" folder)

Louis Boudin (communist theorist, lawyer, writer)

Jack Carney (Irish revolutionist, associated with Irish communist writer in Chicago – James Larkin)

Tom Mooney (sentenced for supposed involvement in 1916 San Francisco parade explosion, prisoner at San Quentin) (see Subject File: "Rose Pastor Stokes Testimonial and Concert")

Series Descriptions

Series I, CORRESPONDENCE is arranged in three sections: General Correspondence, Family Correspondence, and Correspondence of Others. Folders are arranged alphabetically by correspondent or by the name of a business or organization. Letters within the folders are arranged chronologically.

General Correspondence contains considerable correspondence under the headings "Birth Control," "Political Organizations," "Patrick Quinlan Case," and "Writings of RPS," in addition to the correspondence of the persons named on the preceding pages.

Family Correspondence contains extensive correspondence between Rose Pastor Stokes and each of her two husbands, James Graham Phelps Stokes and Jerome Isaac Romaine. There is also correspondence with Anson Phelps Stokes, brother of James, who was at the time secretary to Yale University. The remaining correspondence is with Rose Pastor Stokes's mother, half brothers Maurice, Bernard, and Robert, half sister Lillian, stepson Jerry, sister-in-law Helen and other family members.

Correspondence of Others consists primarily of the correspondence of Jerome Romaine, some of which bears the signature Victor J. Jerome, Romaine's alias. In addition, there is correspondence pertaining to Rose Pastor Stokes's unfinished autobiography.

Series II, WRITINGS, consists of manuscripts and printed writings arranged alphabetically by subject.

Among the manuscript materials there are several typewritten political tracts, copies of two speeches, a typewritten opinion on divorce and a short diary for 1933. Included in the printed material are feature columns written for the New York Jewish Daily News, several magazine articles, a few published poems, and some miscellaneous pamphlets.

Of special interest in the series is a photocopy of Rose Pastor Stokes's unfinished autobiography, which covers the period from 1879 to 1905, and a copy of Minority Report to be appended to Program and Methods of Approach. The latter is part of a report on the Negro question in America presented to the 4th Comintern Congress, Petrograd-Moscow, 1922. Rose Pastor Stokes was a member of the reporting committee and wrote under the nom-de-plume "Sacha."

Series III, PRINTED MATERIAL is arranged in three sections: Scrapbooks, Newspaper Clippings, and Pamphlets and Posters. Within each section, the folder titles are arranged alphabetically by subject. Material in the folders is arranged chronologically.

The Scrapbook section contains the contents of two scrapbooks which have been removed from their bindings and placed in folders. The first scrapbook comprises newspaper clippings dated from November 1915 to January 1917. The bulk of the clippings are concerned with Rose Pastor Stokes's views on socialism, her activities in support of the dissemination of birth control information to the public, the Patrick Quinlan appeal in New Jersey, and several legal cases, including the trials of Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Jessie Ashley, Margaret Sanger, and Emma Goldman. The second scrapbook contains newspaper clippings, dated 1916 to 1920, which concern the activities of Valdimir Resnikoff, a blind Russian baritone in whom Rose Pastor Stokes took great interest.

Newspaper Clippings include articles about the life – both public and private – of Rose Pastor Stokes, reviews of several of her plays, her translations of Morris Rosenfeld's poetry, and articles on a plagiarism controversy involving R.H. Davis's play The Guilty Man. Also included are articles on various medical discoveries, on several labor strikes, on the theater, and some miscellaneous material. Last, there is a folder of posthumous tributes to Rose Pastor Stokes.

The third section, Pamphlets and Posters, consists of material from various political, social, and literary organizations spanning the period from 1903-1932.

Series IV, the SUBJECT FILE contains material on the Rose Pastor Stokes Testimonial and Concert (1933) and the Rose Pastor Stokes Rest Home (1936). Included in the former, under the heading "Program Notes," are written testimonials from a number of well-known people such as Eugene V. Debs, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Upton Sinclair, and Lincoln Steffens. In addition, there are minutes of various organizations, several poems by people other than Rose Pastor Stokes, legal records and documents, news releases, political campaign material for James Graham Phelps Stokes, a copy of Rose Pastor Stokes's will and miscellaneous photographs. The series is arranged alphabetically by subject.
