INTRODUCTION

History of the Collection

The Women and Health/Mental Health Collection began as a part of the Topical Research Department of the Women's History Library in 1963. Later incorporated as the Women's History Research Center, Inc., the Library began as a response to the need of many women to have access to materials about the history of women. The Library's creators decided to build a collection themselves that represented "herstory", rather than to leave such a project to chance. Therefore, at the beginning, every item that was relevant to a particular subject as it related to women was collected, clipped, copied, and sent to the Library. Here, women had the job of ascertaining the sources and dates of these items, classifying them according to topics, and filing them. As the number of files grew, they needed further ordering, so we began the lettering and numbering system of the library. This system is thoroughly explained on pages

Material for the Library was collected by women all around the country, from press of all kinds, including professional journals and underground alternative newspapers. Non-press sources were also used including academic research papers and theses, speeches delivered at conferences, leaflets, poetry and graphics printed by women themselves. Within any subject heading in the library materials from most of these sources can be found; no single point of view is represented exclusively.

The variety of our sources created a problem when we prepared to microfilm them, yet we felt that filming was necessary. Why? First, the collection had grown beyond the Center's ability to maintain it. Second, nationwide requests for the use of the library's files for research made it obvious that the collection needed to be made available, and microfilming would make this possible. Third, sufficient funds were not received to make it possible to operate the library. However, a few grants were received to fund micro-publishing some of the collection. So, the microfilm project was begun.

Consulting librarians proposed plans for arranging materials: within subject headings, by publication, or by a chronology. Publications were too numerous to make that feasible. Therefore, material in each of the subjects, already established by the library and now selected for filming, was arranged chronologically. The oldest materials were placed first in files, and the most recent were last. The source was noted on each item, and care was taken to avoid abbreviations that might not be clear to a researcher. Subject headings with voluminous contents were sub-divided. These include files on Abortion, Birth Control, Health Centers and Health Care, and the Pill. The sub-categories used for each of these subjects are explained in the alphabetical index.

Sections of the Microfilm

The microfilmed collection is presented in seven sections.

Section One covers the Physical and Mental Health of Women. Section Two considers Physical and Mental Illnesses of Women. Section Four deals with Biology, Women, and the Life Cycle. Section Four is Birth Control and Population Control materials. Section Five includes Sex and Sexuality. Section Six is about Black and Third World Women and Health. Section Seven includes Special Issues of Mass Periodicals relevant to the topics of the microfilm. Within each of these sections the subject headings follow, as much as possible, the Medical Subject Headings (MeSH headings) used as the library subject heading system in medical schools.

Thus within Section One our file subject headings appear under outline topics that are found in MeSH. In some cases our file titles match one of the MeSH headings. All of the Women's History Library file titles are followed by the letter and number of the file, such as "Abortion (I 12)". Other headings used in the outline for the microfilm (see Table of Contents) are MeSH headings. In the alphabetical index some subject headings are used as cross references that are neither MeSH nor our library's headings. The additional headings were suggested by librarians who felt that they would help the average person searching through the index. For example, "Barmaids" is included in the alphabetical index, and one is referred to our file on "Prostitutes, Women as (G 26)".

The seven main sections of the microfilm are self-explanatory, but a word is needed regarding Sections Six and Seven. Section Six, on Black and Third World Women, includes materials on minority women which was separated out of the files and made available on its own reel because of interest of persons involved in Black and Third World

Studies Programs. Section Six is organized according to the same format as Sections One through Five and subject headings within these Sections. All subject headings within Section Six are designated by the abbreviation BTWW:H (Black and Third World Women: Health). So, for example, if you look in the Table of Contents you will see "Hospital Workers (BTWW:H-A3)" in the outline. The "A3", which follows the BTWW:H abbreviation, indicates the position of the subject within the outline. "Hospital Workers" is the third item in part A of Section Six. The notation (BTWW:H-A3) distinguishes this file from "Hospital Workers, Women as (G 170)", file number G 170 in the original library collection from which the Section Six materials were selected.

Some subject headings appear in Section Six that do not match the original Women's History subject headings. Some new classifications were needed for special concerns of minorities, such as "Poisoning: Lead and Pollution".

Section Seven, the periodicals appendix to the microfilm, is organized in the same order as that of Sections One through Six, and the subject headings within them. There are not special issues of periodicals for every subject in Sections One through Six, of course. However, many topics of this microfilm were treated by numerous special issues of mass periodicals. Birth Control, for example, was included in Section Four of the microfilm. Special issues relating to birth control appear in part IV of Section Seven. All periodicals having articles on this subject are listed in alphabetical order beneath the heading.

The File Classification System

The following is an explanation of the Women's History Research Center, Inc.'s file classification numbers: The File Classification Number is found in parentheses directly after the File Title in both the Tables of Contents and the alphabetical index. It does not refer to the file's position in the microfilm. Rather, it is part of the system invented by the librarians at the Women's History Research Center, Inc. for their collection of Topical Files. (These files are now accessible at the Archive of Contemporary History, University of Wyoming, Laramie, Wyoming.)

The letter component of the File Classification Number is the most telling. It reveals the broad category of information which will be found in the file. For examples, all "H" files contain material about individual women; all "J" files are about Women's Liberation Groups. The number following the letter is an arbitrary one, assigned chronologically as each new file was started. There are approximately 2,000 files in the system.

The following are brief explanations of file classifications relevant to this microfilm:

A: WOMEN IN COUNTRIES contains information on women in various countries outside the U.S., and in ethnic groups in the United States. Material is gathered from around the world and is both contemporary and historical in nature. The category has general information on the changing roles and social conditions of women throughout the world, authored by both men and women. If an individual woman, now deceased, is known by name, she will probably have a file in "B"(Women in History). Also, information about a particular historical movement involving women from a country other than the U.S. will be found in "B". If the women in a particular country have an active women's liberation movement, material will be found in "J" (Women's Liberation Groups). Material is in the form of flyers, pamphlets, graphics, magazine and newspaper clippings, and original research papers.

B: WOMEN IN HISTORY contains information on individual women (deceased) and women in historical movements. (Women still living are listed in "H" (Specific Women).) Given the dearth of available information on women and on women's roles in history, this category was created in order to record new material and gather existing material on individual women in history. Mass media and original papers by or about these women is included as well as reviews and research papers.

C: MEN AND WOMEN'S LIBERATION contains information about men as they have related and reacted to women and women's movements. The material is contemporary as well as historical. Articles are from mass media, and research papers.

D: NON-WOMEN'S LIBERATION GROUPS contains information in three basic sub-categories: (1) groups and organizations with mixed male and female membership in which there is either a separate women's caucus or some emphasis on women's consciousness, (2) groups with all female membership whose focus is not women's liberation, (3) organizations whose membership is mixed, but in which women dominate without any separate consciousness. These are distinct from all women's groups whose focus is women's liberation; that material is found in "J". This file includes articles from mass media, leaflets, position papers, and letters.

E: PROJECTS AND SERVICES includes projects created and run by women since the inception of the women's movement, and services provided by male institutions which meet specific needs of women. Information is current and deals mainly with services available in the U.S. Articles from mass media are contained here as well as records of personal experiences.

F: PROTEST AND EVENTS contains information from rallies, demonstrations, conferences, etc. which dealt with issues of primary importance to women. Material is principally from the U.S. and serves as a chronicle of women's actions in the contemporary women's liberation movement. Articles from mass and alternative press are found here, along with flyers, leaflets, and papers.

G: WOMEN IN ROLES contains material on women in their classical roles, vocations and stereotypes. Information is contemporary and historical and is intended to chronicle the oppression of women in economic and psychological terms. Articles were clipped from mass and alternative press.

H: SPECIFIC WOMEN contains information on women in current history, each of whom have some achievement or characteristic which is of importance to all women, either through her writings, lifestyle, art, politics, or some specific action. The material is about, as well as authored by, the individual woman. Articles from mass and alternative media, reviews, interviews, personal letters, and papers are all here.

I: SUBJECTS includes information on specific topics of interest which primarily describe the nature of women's oppression by institutions and laws. It includes articles from mass and alternative press, and original research.

J: WOMEN'S LIBERATION GROUPS presents material from women's liberation groups throughout the United States and various other countries. Correspondence from individuals is included, along with manifestos, pamphlets, posters, and announcement of group activities. This collection began as active women's liberation groups began to form worldwide and is indicative of the scope of the current women's liberation movement.

K: WOMEN'S FICTION AND WORKS contains material written by women about women solely. Original poetry, songs, art, short fiction, research articles, and position papers by Third World and white women are among the materials here.

L: MASS PERIODICALS includes articles on women and the women's movement from the mass media as well as underground publications.

M: SPECIAL ISSUES OF MASS PERIODICALS and of underground press are presented here. They are focused on women and/or the women's movement, and most are written by women.

Q: WOMEN'S LIBERATION MOVEMENT includes information dealing with issues and arguments related to the women's liberation movement as a whole. New perspectives created by the movement and related new issues which have emerged for women, such as titles and name changing, are considered here.

As an example of how information would be filed, consider the topic of abortion. Material will be found in "A" under Bangladesh Women in "B" under Margaret Sanger, in "C" under Dr. Hippocrates, in "E" under Planned Parenthood, in "F" under Pat McInnes, in "I" under Abortion, etc.

Organization of the Reel Guide - Catalogue

The reel guide - catalogue is organized as follows:

The first part of this catalogue is the introduction to the microfilm of which this paragraph is a part. The second part is the alphabetical index, or catalogue to the film. It includes our file headings, MeSH headings, and other subjects with reference to our related files. Every subject heading that is given on the film is listed in the catalogue, along with an annotation describing the contents of the file and cross references to other pertinent files on the microfilm. The reel and image number for each heading is shown in this section in the column to the right of the heading.

The Table of Contents of the microfilm comprises the other part of the catalogue. Titles and subject headings are shown in the order they appear on the film. Next to these headings and titles are the reel and image numbers where the Contents first appear on the microfilm.

Image Numbering

At the top of every image on the microfilm which contains material, there appears a small number. Each reel contains from nine hundred to twelve hundred images. Each reel begins with image number one and numbers continue consecutively to the end of the reel, with the exceptions of the cases listed below. Image numbers were included in our microfilm to make materials more easily accessible. If one is searching for a particular topic, one first finds it in this Reel Guide, either in the Table of Contents or the Alphabetical Index. Beside the subject the reel and image numbers are shown indicating where the materials can be found. By picking out that reel to view and running it quickly on the viewer to the indicated image number the user has easy access to the desired part of the film.

In some cases it was impossible for us to microfilm our files in the order shown in the Table of Contents. In such cases, the microfilm was spliced so that the material appears in the order shown in the Table of Contents. As a result, some image number appear out of sequence. When doing such splicing, a sign was included on the microfilm warning the user that the numbers to follow are out of sequence. We have listed below the actual order in which image numbers appear in the cases where this has been necessary. In a few other cases, from one to ten image numbers may be missing in the midst of a subject heading. In all of these cases, there is no material missing from the microfilm. Rather the rearrangement of the materials has in these instances caused the absence of some numbers.

The image numbers which are out of sequence are listed below in the order that they appear on the microfilm.

Reel 2: Image numbers run 001 to 1065
1065 to 1142
1186 to 1251
1143 to 1184
1253 to end

Reel 3: Image numbers run 001 to 105
140 to 161
106 to 139
163 to end

Reel 10: Image numbers run 1270 to 1272
1295 to 1358
1280 to 1294

Reel 12: Image numbers run 001 to 661
769 to 810
662 to 768
818 to end

Since microfilms are difficult to plan exactly, some reels ended in inconvenient places along the outline for the entire microfilm. In such situations it might have made it necessary for a purchaser to buy several partial reels in order to have all of the contents of one Section. So, we rearranged the whole microfilm, keeping Sections separate as much as possible, while also keeping reels full, that is not half reels or less. The result is that a few reels do not begin with image number one. Other reels have a section "A" appended to the end in which images begin again with number one. The list of such instances is below.

Reel 4 images run: 001 to 1326
                  section 4A is appended with images 001 to 285

Reel 5 images run: 286 to 1085
                  section 5A is appended with images 006 to 197

Reel 6 images run: 198 to the end

Reel 8 images run: 001 to 1331
                  section 8A is appended with images 007 to 411

Reel 9 images run: 412 to the end

Reel 12 images run: 001 to 1092
                  section 12A is appended with images 001 to 144

Addenda

Some materials related to certain files of the collection arrived so close to the time of filming that it could not be filed into its proper date order, although this happened quite rarely. In most cases, after the "No Source No Date" section there appears an "Addenda" section where these late materials are found. In an effort to update the microfilm during the time it was being filmed, additional materials relating to the microfilm were gathered. This material was filmed in an "Addenda to the Microfilm". A plus sign (+) has been placed next to all subjects for which such materials were filmed, where the subject is listed in this reel guide. The last page of the Table of Contents tells the reel and image numbers where the addenda materials for each Section of the microfilm can be found.

The time period covered by this microfilm is roughly 1965-1974. The Addenda to the Microfilm contains primarily 1974 materials, although there are some earlier and more recent materials also. The microfilming project spanned Spring '74 - Spring '75.

Abbreviations and Symbols

In nearly every instance on this microfilm there are complete source and date citations for the material presented. Materials for which we could not find source and date were included only if they were important. They are collected in the microfilm at the end of each subject with a sign indicating that they are "No Source or No Date" materials. In some cases abbreviations have been used to indicate sources, although most sources were written out in full. The following is a list of the abbreviations commonly used by the staff when listing a source.

Barb: The Berkeley Barb

EDG: Berkeley Daily Gazette

Bird: The Great Speckled Bird (Atlanta, Georgia)

Bridge: The Willamette Bridge (Oregon)

HWRM: Harrisburg Women's Rights Movement

I.A.M.B.: It Ain't Me Babe

L.A.Times: Los Angeles Times

NL: Abbreviation for Newsletter

NOWletter: a National Organization for Women Newsletter

N. Y. Times: New York Times

Oak. Trib.: Oakland Tribune

OOB: Off Our Backs

Patriot: Kalamazoo or Southern Patriot

S.F. Exam-Chron: San Francisco Sunday Examiner-Chronicle

Symbols are sometimes used in this Reel Guide and some are also used in the microfilm itself.

- (1 12) A single letter followed by numbers, enclosed in parentheses, is the number of the file containing the materials in the Women's History Library. See the description of "The File Classification System" on pages v through viii of this Introduction.

(BTWW:H-A1) BTWW:H is an abbreviation for Black and Third World Women and Health, the subject of Section Six of this microfilm. The letter and number that follow the abbreviation refer to the position of the subject heading in Section Six. See the description of "Sections of the Microfilm" on pages ii through iv of this Introduction.

+ This plus sign indicates that additional information about this subject heading may be found in the Addenda to the Microfilm. See the description of "Addenda" on page xi of this Introduction.

(Section Seven, IV, E, 1, "Abortion") Section Seven of this microfilm includes special issues of mass periodicals relating to the subjects of this microfilm. The letters and numbers refer to the position of the subject heading in Section Seven. The Roman numeral and capital letter correspond with the section and subsection of the main part of the microfilm (Sections One through Six) where this same subject can also be found. See the description of "Sections of the Microfilm" on pages ii through iv of this Introduction.

Image numbers appear out of sequence on the microfilm. See page x of the Introduction for explanation and the actual order in which the image numbers appear.

 This paper on female sexuality presents the thesis that orgasms in women occur in the clitoris not the vagina. The author discusses the origins of the belief in vaginal orgasms and its effect on women's sex roles: "Men have orgasms essentially by friction with the vagina, not the clitoris...Women have thus been defined sexually in terms of what pleases men; our own biology has not been properly analyzed. Instead, we are fed the myth of the liberated woman and her vaginal orgasm, an orgasm which in fact does not exist.

- Krause, Charlotte, M.S.W., "Women in Therapy and Social Workers as Therapists Introducing a New Concept: The Femininity Complex" (K 1719)..... 3 716
 Education and new methods of birth control have opened new choices to women; but many are unable to make these choices freely, feeling that they are abnormal if they do not marry and bear children, and bind their lives to serving a husband and family. It is this fear of abnormality plus the internal prohibition against self-assertion which Krause labels the "femininity complex". This complex is strongly felt among female social workers, who, Krause maintains, would make good psychotherapists if given the chance. However, most women go to male therapists for the same reasons they look to men to fulfill their lives. For many women, a female therapist would be of great help.

Lydon, Susan, "Understanding Orgasm" (K 996)..... 10 1280 #

This article deals with women's sexuality as it has been defined by men - female sexuality so defined has been downgraded, perverted, abused, and repressed to convince women of their sexual inferiority to men. Freud's role in formulating this myth of female sexuality (e.g. penis envy, vaginal versus clitoral orgasm) is discussed as is the role of Masters and Johnson in exploding the myth. The Freudian myths are seen as another way of keeping women subservient to men. This article contends that in spite of the so-called Sexual Revolution women are still not sexually liberated, and won't be until they can define and enjoy their own forms of sexuality.

The author intends to "Share with other women some thoughts about the dynamics of physical and emotional violence perpetrated by men - not especially thieves or rapists, but lovers and husbands...Indeed to oppress effectively, their own protection must always be increasing. They may deny the most blatant oppression, but they will always affirm the 'rights' they have taken for themselves. They know the rage and frustration of their victims is so great that it is potential power. You must understand that first and last it is a struggle for power and that violence is the common denominator..."
