FOREWORD

The rich collection of 1,800 autograph letters and documents published here was assembled in the past forty years by a man whose personal experiences before coming to the United States and whose studies in comparative government since that time have made him uncommonly sensitive to the historical and continuing significance of the American Revolution. Sol Feinstone's collection is thus both a testimony of his devotion to the liberal principles of the Enlightenment and a bibliophilic achievement comparable to William B. Sprague's in the last century and Lloyd Smith's in this.

But Mr. Feinstone has more than a passion for acquiring the rare and precious records of the American past. He has wanted them used. Other collectors have often generously opened their libraries to serious scholars; but Mr. Feinstone is doing more than this: he has had the entire collection catalogued and indexed (at his own expense) and has allowed it to be filmed (underwriting a substantial part of the cost of that operation). As a result, the remarkable Sol Feinstone Collection of the American Revolution is now accessible to everyone for any purpose whatever. One of the purposes, especially dear to Mr. Feinstone, is that the very words of the past should be used to instruct the present how to "survive in freedom."

By this wise and generous act Mr. Feinstone has insured that his collection of manuscripts, of such great value for the national history, will always be available for the use and enrichment of the American people. By his labors in assembling this collection, his generosity in making it available to all, by his insuring that none of its irreplaceable documents will ever be lost to history, Mr. Feinstone has performed the same kind of useful public service which Ebenezer Hazard performed in assembling and publishing our first collection of state papers more than 175 years ago, for which he received Jefferson's enduring commendation:

I learn with great satisfaction that you are about committing to the press the valuable historical and state-papers you have been so long collecting. Time and accident are committing daily havoc on the originals deposited in our public offices ... The lost cannot be recovered: but let us save what remains: not by vaults and locks which fence them from the public eye and use, in consigning them to the waste of time, but by such a multiplication of copies, as shall place them beyond the reach of accident.

Gentlemen:

I am grateful to you for the help freely
given to me by your Library for the preservation and use of my collection of original manuscripts of the American Revolution.

Without the constant encouragement and advice
of your Librarian, Dr. Whitfield J. Bell, Jr., and his excellent staff, it could not have been accomplished at this time. I am forever indebted to you and to them.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Sol Feinstone". The signature is written in dark ink and is positioned above the printed name.

Sol Feinstone
